About the Editor

Hi, I'm Natasha Khullar Relph, the founding editor of The Wordling!

I'm an award-winning freelance journalist, a bestselling indie author, and a serial creative entrepreneur. I've lived on four continents, written for publications in 80+ countries, and been a contributor to The New York Times, TIME, CNN, BBC, Psychology Today, ABC New, Marie Claire, Vogue, Ms, and more.

My books include Shut Up and Write: The No-Nonsense, No B.S. Guide to Getting Words on the Page and eight other bestselling books for writers. My work has also been included in The Lonely Planet Travel Anthology: True Stories From the World's Best Writers (Lonely Planet, 2016), Breaking Out: How to Build Influence in a World of Competing Ideas (Harvard Business Review Press, May 2013), Voices of Alcoholism (LaChance Publishing, April 2008), and Chicken Soup for the Pre-Teen Soul 2 (HCI, June 2004).

A few things to note:

- This list is organized by agency for ease of use. Generally, it is advised to only pitch one agent in the agency at a time.
- PublishersMarketplace.com is a paid resource. It is fantastic for looking into previous agent sales and the editors and publishers they sell to, and for how much. While most agents will keep their profiles up-to-date, not all do. Please keep this in mind.
- This list is meant to be a starting point, a resource to simplify and organize all the information in one place. It is still an excellent idea to research each agent individually through the links provided and more thoroughly if you're planning to pitch (or sign with) them.
- This list is current as of May 2021.

Happy hunting, and I wish you all the luck in the world for your search. May you find the perfect fit!

Cheers,

Natasha Khullar Relph

64. Name of Agent: Laura Rennert

Looking for: "Laura gravitates toward the gorgeously written, the weirdly idiosyncratic, and the refreshingly unexpected. The common threads in the diverse range of projects Laura represents are conflicted, dynamic characters; a fresh, strong voice; an unusual point of view; and vivid world-building. She loves works that draw on literary traditions and reimagine them as something completely, captivatingly new. She has a special fondness for books that play with commercial tropes, but give them surprising emotional depth.

"She'd love to find fiction in all categories with an intriguing, thoughtful feminist sensibility. She's seeking diverse fantasies and thrillers that use underrepresented traditions, histories, or cultures as the basis for their world-building. She's drawn to narrative risk-takers. She'd particularly like to find middle grade, YA, or adult fiction that tells an emotionally compelling story in an unusual way – like Mitali Perkins' YOU BRING THE DISTANT NEAR, which uses linked stories to explore sisterhood, first loves, and the inheritance of cultures across three generations of girls; or Maggie Stiefvater's THE SCORPIO RACES, which takes the Celtic legend of the water horse and turns it into something wildly original and wonderfully unexpected. In thrillers and psychological suspense/horror, she gravitates towards unreliable narrators and morally ambiguous characters. She looks for street cred and authenticity – whether of trade-craft, investigative technique, historical/geographical setting, culture, or psychology. She's fascinated with hidden worlds and secret knowledge."

65. Name of Agent: Caryn Wiseman

Looking for: "Caryn is drawn to contemporary YA and middle grade with a strong voice, multifaceted characters, complex relationships, beautiful writing, and a well-developed hook. Great world-building is essential, whether it's a real time and place that becomes almost a character in a book, or a light fantasy element in a unique story that's grounded in reality. Zombies, horror, and high fantasy will, most likely, never appeal. Caryn is particularly interested in books for children and teens that explore themes of diversity and social justice. She would be thrilled to see more books by underrepresented authors that deeply explore their culture, as well as books in which the ethnicity of the character is not the issue. She adores a swoon-worthy, layered romance; a funny or poignant middle grade novel with a hook that makes it stand out from the crowd would hold great appeal; and she's partial to lyrical, non-institutional picture book biographies and character-driven, not-too-sweet picture book fiction, particularly by author-illustrators. The common denominator in Caryn's list, no matter the category, is "smart with heart." She is always open to terrific children's work that doesn't fit these categories as long as it makes her laugh, makes her cry, and keeps her awake at night, either reading the manuscript or thinking about it. She does not represent adult projects. Please do not query her regarding adult work."

66. Name of Agent: Jennifer Laughran

Looking for: "Always on the lookout for sparkling YA and middle grade fiction with unusual and unforgettable characters and vivid settings, she is drawn to all kinds of books, whether realistic comedies or richly imagined magical adventures. However, the common thread in her favorite stories is an offbeat world-view. Jennifer adores simplicity, but she is not interested in the conventional, predictable, mechanical, gimmicky, or ordinary. Jennifer loves funny books, thrilling books, romantic books, books that make her cry, and all-around un-put-downable books...and her true favorites are all of the above."

67. Name of Agent: Jennifer Rofé

Looking for: "Jennifer is currently accepting queries from only 1) middle grade writers (if in addition to middle grade you write in other children's categories, you are welcome and encouraged to query) 2) author-illustrators 3) illustrators

"Overall, Jennifer seeks masterful writing, distinct voices and perspectives, and richly developed characters (if she is completely consumed by your characters, she will follow them anywhere). Middle grade has always been Jennifer's soft spot and she's open to all genres in this category – literary, commercial, contemporary, magical, fantastical, historical, and everything in between. She especially appreciates stories that make her both laugh and cry, and that offer an unexpected view into the pre-teen/teen experience. In picture books, she likes funny, character-driven projects; beautifully imagined and written stories; and milestone moments with a twist. She longs to have an emotional response to the ending of a picture book – be it a guffaw, hurrah!, or a heart-tug. In illustration, she seeks unique voices and perspectives that have a voice so strong that it's immediately recognizable as belonging to the creator."

This could mean the sweet intensity of an "I love you" picture book, or the shocked intensity of a YA that explores an essential part of the teen experience in a way she's never considered. Unique viewpoints and new takes on perennial topics interest her. In the younger genres, she looks for the hook that will make a book a must-have parenting or educational resource."

70. Name of Agent: Jennifer Mattson

Looking for: "In the picture book arena, Jennifer is interested in authors, illustrators, and author-illustrators who bring a distinctive, well-developed point of view to their work. In longer fiction, her interests are wide-ranging, but she always has a soft spot for middle grade about resilient kids sorting out the messiness of life. In middle grade and YA both, her heart beats faster for richly imagined, mind-bending fantasies that depart from typical quests (portals entered by protagonists who fulfill prophecies don't tend to be for her). The most dogeared books in her childhood library tended to be fantasy adventures, survival stories, and sprawling, atmospheric tales with Dickensian twists and satisfying puzzles. She gravitates to all of the above, but contemporary realistic fiction can work for her too, especially if it's voice-driven and carefully structured. In all categories, she is especially delighted to see queries in her inbox from kid-lit creators underrepresented in mainstream publishing."

71. Name of Agent: Kathleen Rushall

Looking for: "When it comes to picture books, Kathleen loves to laugh, have her heartstrings pulled, and enjoys quirky, character-driven stories with heart. She would be happy to find more biographies and what some call "ficinformational" picture books (books with a fictional story that ties into the Common Core). She's always interested in picture books that inspire emotional intelligence, self awareness, and empathy.

"Kathleen is excited to find middle grade novels across all genres. She has a soft spot for heartfelt stories with depth, as well as humorous stories with a relatable voice. She particularly enjoys middle grade with strong friendship and family themes. She would love to find more spooky middle grade and always enjoys a good mystery.

"For YA novels, Kathleen loves voice-driven contemporary (and is especially fond of magical realism), compelling fantasy with unforgettable characters, and historical fiction.

She's keen to find a contemporary romance with humor and depth. She is always on the lookout for something smart and edgy that pushes the envelope. She would love to see more YA horror, particularly if it has a feminist bent or social commentary."

72. Name of Agent: Lara Perkins

Looking for: "In picture books, Lara is seeking humor-driven stories (primarily by author-illustrators), narrative nonfiction that combines a fascinating story with exceptional visual potential, and lyrical picture books that feel heartbreakingly beautiful and true. She is looking to champion voices that have been underrepresented in children's literature, and she is drawn to bold and colorful art, a playful use of texture and media, and kid-appealing humor and heart.

"Lara is actively building her middle grade and YA fiction list, and she is primarily on the hunt for underrepresented voices and perspectives, a page-turning pace, and either gorgeous writing or a funny and compelling voice (or both!) in all genres. She is eager to find fantasies that capture her imagination, eerie mysteries she can't put down, and endearingly flawed characters who steal her heart. She loves nuanced and layered friendship stories (especially friendship "break up" stories), nontraditional family structures, swoon-worthy romances that are also innovative and insightful, and unreliable narrators of all kinds — adorably clueless, menacingly calculating, and "ghosts who don't know they're ghosts." She loves a puzzle, a setting that feels like another character in the story, and a voice that is surprising and delightful on a line level."

73. Name of Agent: Saritza Hernández

Looking for: "Known as the first literary agent to represent marginalized creators in the digital publishing space, Saritza is a self-proclaimed geek with a passion for all things Star Wars, Star Trek, and tabletop gaming. Her love of great storytelling is what has driven her work in the publishing industry for the past 17 years and her passion for amplifying queer and BIPOC voices is what continues to drive her today. An avid romance and science-fiction reader, and strong advocate of the LGBTQ+ community, she enjoys fresh voices in YA and adult genre fiction. She specializes in romance and young adult fiction by and for diverse audiences.

"She also represents writers and illustrators for middle grade, young adult, and adult (fiction and nonfiction) and is actively building her list in the following categories: • Adult fiction - romance, science fiction, fantasy, and horror. • Adult narrative nonfiction - cooking books (not cookbooks), parenting, humor. • Young adult and middle grade fiction - contemporary/realistic fiction, romance, science fiction, fantasy, mystery and horror. • Young adult and middle grade nonfiction - cooking books, humor, queer narratives, queer history. • Graphic novels - adult, young adult, middle grade (including nonfiction). • Illustrators - middle grade to adult categories"

74. Name of Agent: Jennifer March Soloway

Looking for: "Jennifer represents authors and illustrators of picture book, middle grade, and YA stories, and is actively building her list. Although she specializes in children's literature, she also represents adult fiction, both literary and commercial, particularly crime and psychological suspense projects.

"For picture books, she is drawn to a wide range of stories from silly to sweet, but she always appreciates a strong dose of humor and some kind of surprise at the end. When it comes to middle grade, she likes all kinds of genres, including adventures, mysteries, spooky-but-not-too-scary ghost stories, humor, realistic contemporary, and fantasy.

"YA is Jennifer's sweet spot. She is a suspense junkie. She adores action-packed thrillers full of unexpected twists. Throw in a dash of romance and she's hooked! She's a huge fan of psychological horror that blurs the lines between the real and the imagined. But as much as she loves a good thriller, she finds her favorite novels are literary stories about ordinary teens, especially those focused on family, relationships, sexuality, mental illness, or recovery. In such stories, she is particularly drawn to a close, confiding first-person narrative. Regardless of genre, she is actively seeking fresh new voices and perspectives underrepresented in literature.

"That's her wish list, but the truth is an author might have something she has never considered before, and it might be absolutely perfect for her. She is open to any good story that is well written with a strong, authentic voice. Surprise her!"

75. Name of Agent: Jemiscoe Chambers-Black

Looking for: "Jemiscoe is currently building her client list in the middle grade, YA, and adult categories. She is also interested in considering illustrators and author-illustrators.

"In middle grade, Jemiscoe would like to see fantasy steeped in folklore, mythology, or culture. She is drawn to the paranormal and would really like to see more ghosts and witches. She's open to contemporary fiction that may focus on hard themes, but she enjoys stories that also weave in humor, whimsy, adventure, and wonder. She'd really like to see sibling stories, single parent/grandparent stories, or friendship stories. She's also open to magical realism, horror, mystery, graphic novels, and novels-in-verse.

"In YA, Jemiscoe would love to see romance, especially rom-coms. Give her all the love stories in whatever form they come! She loves contemporary fiction that deals with friendship and/or family - its joys and struggles. She is also open to novels-in-verse, fantasy, mystery, and horror. However, if you've written ghosts, a set of witchy siblings, or feature ancestral magic, please send all of that her way.

"In the adult space, Jemiscoe is open to psychological thrillers, crime, cozy mysteries (think Golden Girls meets Murder She Wrote), friendship or family stories, strong power-women stories, or laugh-out-loud stories. She would also like to see romance - anything from sweet to steamy, especially from underrepresented voices. Jemiscoe loves literary fiction with beautiful prose and a strong cast of characters. She would also like to see adult low or urban fantasy.

"Jemiscoe is especially open to BIPOC and LGBTQ voices and stories in all the above categories."

76. Name of Agent: Paige Terlip

Looking for: "Paige Terlip represents all categories of children's books from picture books to young adult, as well as select adult fiction and nonfiction. She is also actively building her list of illustrators and is especially looking for author-illustrators and graphic novel illustrators.

"Across age categories, Paige is drawn to high concept novels with captivating hooks, snarky characters with hearts of gold, creative magic systems, complicated relationships, and found families. She loves well-plotted twists, being a little bit scared, and stories that explore the fluidity of gender and bring queer experiences to light. Regardless of genre, she is seeking inclusive, intersectional voices and gorgeous line-level writing with emotionally compelling narratives.

"On the adult side she is open to thrillers/psychological suspense, fantasy/sci-fi, upmarket fiction, cozy mysteries, as well as narrative nonfiction and self-help that centers the mind, body, and spirit. She loves stories that make her feel a range of emotions, even if that means she ugly cries while reading. She wants a narrative that will stick with her long after reading."

98. Name of Agent: Masha Gunic

Looking for: "Right now, Masha is only looking to acquire middle grade and young adult novels.

"I am excited to find middle grade novels across all genres. Bring on the adventure, the creepy, the spine-chilling horror, the historical, the imaginative, and the laugh-out-loud funny! I look for dramatic and funny middle grade books with a relatable voice and strong friendship and family themes. Brave or whimsical adventure novels are a sweet spot, especially those starring underdogs and antiheroes. I love fantasy in general, as well as heartbreaking contemporary fiction with exceptional character development.

"I'm drawn to exciting, high-concept and commercial young adult novels that keep me reading chapter after chapter until I'm all done and craving more, as well as unique literary works. I'm specifically searching for contemporary fiction, thrillers and mysteries with satisfying twists, historical fiction, fantasy, and magical realism, but I would especially love to find a smart space opera or grounded science fiction project in the vein of INTERSTELLAR and ARRIVAL. Above all, I'm drawn to young adult novels with a strong voice, masterful writing, beautiful world-building with a vivid setting, and complex characters that are truly unforgettable."

100. Name of Agent: Andrea Walker

Looking for: "Andrea represents PB, MG, and YA and is especially interested in seeing submissions from underrepresented voices.

"My tastes are very selective for Picture Books. I'm looking for high-concept stories with a great hook. Text that is so well written, I visualize the illustrations as I'm reading. I love to laugh in the PB space and enjoy anything quirky or fun like I WANT MY HAT BACK or filled with heart like in A SICK DAY FOR AMOS MCGEE. While, I love lyrical prose, I am not a good fit for rhyming text or anything that is overly sweet. Overall, I love to be surprised, if you've taken a concept and flipped it on its head, I'd love to see it!

"I am eager to build my middle grade list and on the lookout for lower mg and chapter books too. I'm always interested in high-concept, but I'm really looking for voice and the ability to capture the complex feelings of this age.

"I absolutely love YA, it's what really drew me to the world of publishing. Again, I'm really drawn to high-concept and commercial young adult works. I'm looking for stories that stay with you long after you finish them like SLAY and THE WILDER GIRLS. Beautiful prose that sweeps you into the world with no looking back like CARAVAL or THE HAZEL WOOD. Books that blend prose and epistolary like SADIE or RULES FOR VANISHING. Stories with standout voice like YOU SHOULD SEE ME IN A CROWN and explore tough topics or deeper truths as in THE GRACE YEAR. I'm always interested in stories where magic is real and hiding in plain sight, books with speculative elements, and mysteries."

101. Name of Agent: Alexander Weiss

Looking for: "Across the board, I'm dedicated to representing marginalized creators and diverse stories. I'm actively seeking BIPOC, LGBTQIA+, genderfluid, neurodiverse, and disabled voices for all ages and genres.

"Please send me your early reader, MG, and YA graphic novel proposals! I'm actively seeking contemporary projects but am open to all genres.

"I love heartfelt, funny, and whimsical picture books. If you have a clever concept that's never been done before or provides a fresh twist on a classic tale (such as PRINCE AND KNIGHT), please send it my way. I'm also eagerly searching for picture books books that introduce STEAM concepts and make complex topics approachable (and fun!) for young readers.

"I adore all types of adventurous, smart, and out-of-the-box chapter and middle-grade books. Silly schemes! Fantastic friendships! Ambitious adventures! If it has magic, science, or time travel, I'm all in. I'm also a big fan of contemporary middle grade that pulls at your heartstrings (think I'LL SEE YOU IN THE COSMOS and SONG FOR A WHALE). I'm particularly interested in finding more middle grade that isn't afraid to explore the complicated emotions and challenges preteens face today.

"I'm most drawn to contemporary, light science fiction and fantasy, as well as magical realism in YA. I'm looking for strong, distinct, and diverse voices that authentically capture the coming-of-age experience. I'm a fan of angsty characters and stories that explore difficult situations, but I'd also love to see more lighthearted and fluffy romcoms. I'm also interested in YA stories that take place outside of the US or feature mythology from non-western cultures.

"ADULT: Currently, I'm seeking nonfiction proposals from scientists and experts in their field. Some topics I'm interested in include global warming, space exploration, and mental health. I'm also open to unique gift books that bring something new to the table."

107. Name of Agent: Cortney Radocaj

Looking for: "As a member and advocate of both the LGBT and neurodiverse communities, Cortney adores seeing works that celebrate and normalize these experiences, particularly in YA. Compelling characters are what grab her the most; she loves books with strong, dynamic, complex characters that have complicated and nuanced relationships with others. She loves romantic threads that weave in seamlessly with the plot and characters' motivations, particularly in SFF. In regard to POV, the closer, the better; she wants to live inside characters' heads when she reads, and loves as little distance as possible."

BOOKER ALBERT AGENCY

138. Name of Agent: Brittany Booker Carter

Looking for: "She is looking for novels that keep her up at night and transport her into the pages. In YA and NA she is looking for well-written contemporary and paranormal romances. In NA she is looking for LOTS of sexual tension, and a sexy demanding hero never hurt anybody! As for adult works, she's looking for witty contemporary, and slow burning friends to lovers romances. She's always on the hunt for rich characters and unique plots. She is a big sucker for happy endings. (She doesn't represent books without a HEA, they make her sad. She believes every person deserves a Happily-Ever-After. Maybe it's just the Disney Princess inside?) She also has a passion for books set in the south. Bring on those big ole' cowboys, ladies. I'll take any man with a slow, southern drawl! She has working knowledge of Japanese and Spanish. Brittany is not looking for memoirs or MG novels at the time."

139. Name of Agent: Jordy Albert

Looking for: "Jordy is looking for fun, witty young adult contemporary, particularly sci-fi, and fantasy (romance is a plus). She's also looking for smart, sexy contemporary and historical romance (Jordy definitely has a soft spot for Regency). She's drawn to strong, intelligent characters, and well-developed friendships. Please note that while it isn't necessarily a deal breaker, she tends to shy away from novels with trigger topics, such as suicide and any type of abuse. Jordy is NOT accepting picture books, non-fiction or screenplays at this time."

149. Name of Agent: Minju Chang

Looking for: "She represents both fiction and nonfiction in all children's book categories: picture books, chapter books, middle-grade, graphic novels and YA. She also represents illustrators and is on the hunt for author-illustrators."

"Across all genres and formats, Minju looks for emotional resonance and distinctive voices. She is always on the lookout for an unusual and authentic "insider" point of view, stories that shift her perspective of the world, and vivid settings that make her want to linger and explore. On her current wish list: evocative magical realism; heartwarming MG with clever and gutsy characters; realistic and fantastical graphic novels for ages 5 and up; strong female characters in all genres; picture books that range from charming and quirky to irreverent and subversive; narrative non-fiction with a timely hook; voice-driven historical fiction; re-tellings of fairy tales, myths and legends; re-imagination of the literary canon (esp. Austen, Brontë sisters, Dickens, and Collins); "light" fantasy; YA romance with tons of humor; and stories about finding family and friends in unexpected places and ways. She is also eager to find projects from diverse creators, both writers and artists, and underrepresented voices. (Diversity including but also going beyond race and gender.)"

BRADFORD LITERARY AGENCY

151. Name of Agent: Laura Bradford

Looking for: "She is actively building her client list and represents work in the following categories: romance (historical, romantic suspense, category, contemporary, erotic), speculative fiction, women's fiction, historical fiction, mystery, thrillers, young adult, upper middle grade, illustration as well as some select non fiction. She is especially interested in acquiring graphic novels, anything #ownvoices, and recent items on her wish list include: plus-sized heroines, manuscripts with disabled rep, a mystery/suspense series with a female protagonist that is an expert in a thinky field (like the Temperance Brennan series by Kathy Reichs), deep, juicy middle grade with a lot of emotional gravitas, a historical mystery series with a slow burn romance, multigenerational women;s fiction with some cool time periods and settings, middle grade with non-traditional family dynamics, stories of Black joy (any age), funny, escapist YA, forced proximity survival stories (stranded on an island? plane crash in the mountains? snowed in? Any age."

154. Name of Agent: Jennifer Chen Tran

Looking for: "As a person of color and second-generation daughter of Taiwanese immigrants, Jennifer is very interested in diverse writers and #ownvoices from underrepresented/ marginalized communities. As a former art major, Jennifer is also eager to grow her list of illustrators and actively looking for graphic novel projects, in both MG and YA. She believes that visual literacy is increasingly important in our interconnected world and that graphic novels help reluctant readers become voracious readers. In adult fiction, she also wants to see strong and conflicted characters who are not afraid to take emotional risks, stories about multi-generational conflict, war and post-war fiction, and writing with a developed sense of place. Basically, surprise her!

"In non-fiction, she loves books that broaden her perspective on a variety of topics, but that also dive deep into worlds unseen. Books like EVICTED by Matthew Desmond and MAID by Stephanie Land are examples of the type of non-fiction she is looking for. Additionally, Jennifer is always interested in cooking, lifestyle, health, parenting, and business titles that present the author's expertise and are instructive without being pedantic. Teach her something new and you will pique her interest!"

160. Name of Agent: Jody Kahn

Looking for: "Jody represents both literary and upmarket fiction, as well as narrative nonfiction; across all categories she enjoys books that are beautifully written while also containing a rich storyline, and she's especially looking for deeply drawn characters and voice-driven narratives. Humor is always a plus. She's also interested in untold stories, misunderstood populations, and anything that's plugged into the current cultural conversation. In nonfiction, she's seeking narratives related to culture, social justice, sports, food, history, literary memoir and journalism. Above all, she wants to be gripped by what she's reading and taken into a new and riveting world, one that touches her with layers of complexity and does not easily let go."

216. Name of Agent: Chelsey Emmelhainz

Looking for: "Actively building her client list, Chelsey is focused on commercial, diverse voices in fiction and nonfiction. She is especially interested in adult fiction that marries the known and the unknown. A lover of plot-driven narratives, she's most often drawn to fast-paced stories featuring well-drawn, believable characters navigating extraordinary circumstances. Her target genres in those spaces include: horror, supernatural thriller, suspense, and mystery. Her ideal women's fiction, book club fiction, and romance projects feature high-concept hooks, strong female characters, and unique takes on modern relationships—be they romantic, platonic, or familial. Chelsey is open to speculative fiction projects based in the known world, especially those exploring magical realism (i.e.: Station Eleven or The Night Circus rather than Lord of the Rings or The Chronicles of Narnia).

"For nonfiction, she gravitates toward history, especially narrative nonfiction, memoirs with a platform, and untold stories in true crime, but is open to projects in the areas of DIY projects (she's a knitting fiend), gardening, and unique lifestyles."

CRAIG LITERARY

220. Name of Agent: Jessica Craig

Looking for: "I love books of fiction or non-fiction that explore globally relevant themes, that transport the reader on a surprising journey across boundaries of culture, and sometimes even of genre; storytelling that dismantles walls and builds bridges, challenging and deepening the reader's understanding of self and other, of society, language, art, or humanity.

"I also love a thriller or suspense novel that hooks me from the first page to the last.

"I never thought I would be an agent of young adult or middle grade fiction until Jack Cheng delivered his manuscript to me, See You in the Cosmos, with an 11-year-old narrator who grabbed my heart and also made me laugh, and that I quickly sold in the US and UK and to several foreign publishers. So now I am interested in new voices for kids, that will entertain and enlighten adult readers too."

CREATIVE MEDIA AGENCY

221. Name of Agent: Paige Wheeler

Looking for: "I'm looking to represent a broad range of projects. In particular, I've been reading upscale commercial fiction and nonfiction books that tell a unique story or ones in which the author has a huge platform. I seem to be especially drawn to a story if it has a high concept and a fresh, unique voice.

"Fiction: All commercial fiction and Upscale (think book club) fiction, as well as women's fiction, romance (all types), mystery, thrillers, inspirational/Christian and psychological suspense. I enjoy both historical fiction as well as contemporary fiction, so do keep that in mind.

"Nonfiction: I'm looking for both narrative nonfiction and prescriptive nonfiction. I'm looking for books where the author has a huge platform and something new to say in a particular area. Some of the areas that I like are lifestyle, relationship, parenting, business/entrepreneurship, food-subsistence-homesteading topics, popular/trendy reference projects and women's issues. I'd like books that would be a good fit on the Today show."

I love when a book can grip my emotions enough to make me laugh or cry. While I enjoy happy endings, I don't shy away from dark stories or tragic romances.

"What I Want to Represent: I'm looking for talented writers in these genres in adult and young adult fiction:

- Nonfiction (historical and cultural topics)
- Fantasy & science fiction (and all speculative fiction)
- Horror
- Historical fiction (in all sub-genres)
- Thriller
- Romance (I tend to gravitate toward historical romance)"

241. Name of Agent: Julie Dinneen

Looking for: "I'm looking for literary fiction with commercial appeal and beautiful, stand-out writing (The Girls, Cloud Atlas). I'm on the lookout for upmarket general, women's and historical fiction my book club will want to spend hours talking about (Big Little Lies, The Nest, Orphan Train). I'd love to discover a new twist on chick lit – think Bridget Jones for millennials – and I have a weakness for fun, perfectly-executed beach reads. I'm also looking for well-written romance, both contemporary and historical. I especially enjoy epic, genre-bending romance (Outlander, The Bronze Horseman), and I never say never when it comes to paranormal, although believability and originality are essential."

DEFIORE & COMPANY

258. Name of Agent: Brian DeFiore

Looking for: "My tastes are eclectic, and I tend to respond favorably to projects of any sort if they demonstrate a real storytelling talent. And to me, that means a combination of strong narrative drive and mastery of voice which leads the reader seamlessly into the author's realm and won't let him leave without a fight. It's not easy to do, and not easy to describe. But when it's there, it's hard to miss. That said, the areas I tend to respond more favorably to in non-fiction are memoir, popular culture, pop science, sports, self/help and inspiration, cookbooks, humor and lifestyle. In fiction: not romance or western. But all other sorts of novels that meet the criteria for 'storytelling talent' for both adult and young adult readers."

260. Name of Agent: Adam Shear

Looking for: "For non-fiction, he loves popular science, deeply reported narratives, literary memoir, and big idea books. He's always looking for a writer who can explain a complicated concept in a gripping way. For fiction, he is interested in seeing inspired literary novels, voice driven comedies, smart thrillers with sharp dialogue, debuts and short story collections. Send him flawed, unreliable, magnetic characters, quirky dark novels that retain their humor and heart, and novels that blur the distinction between literary and other genres. He has a soft spot for sci-fi, especially when it breaks the mold, and YA with an honest and compelling voice. Across the board, he's looking for the type of book that you're compelled to recommend to everyone you know, and then secretly feel jealous that they get to read it for the first time."

266. Name of Agent: Miriam Altshuler

Looking for: "Miriam specializes in adult literary and book club fiction, narrative nonfiction, and books for children. She is particularly interested in finding emerging and underrepresented voices, and she loves reading and representing books that focus on diversity and explore the experiences of BIPOC people."

"First and foremost, she responds to voice and stories that are character-driven. She searches for books that draw her in and give her a new perspective on a world she doesn't know, or make her think more deeply about a world she does know. Miriam seeks books with a heart and writers with wonderful storytelling abilities.

"In fiction, she is most interested in family sagas, historical novels, and stories that offer a new twist or retelling of some kind. She does not work with adult romance, sci fi, or fantasy.

"In nonfiction, she loves memoir, narrative nonfiction, and self-help (as long as it is not highly prescriptive). She particularly responds to books that have an important cultural, social, or psychological focus.

"For children's books, she focuses primarily on YA and middle grade, and her tastes vary broadly in those areas. It always comes back to the voice and the heart of a story for her."

267. Name of Agent: Chris Park

Looking for: "Chris represents books across a broad spectrum of nonfiction—memoirs, narrative, prescriptive, Christian, and sports—and works with her authors to develop books that are appealing and accessible to a broad audience.

"She is passionate about stories that must be told: of an achievement-oriented mother who learns the true worth of every life when her daughter is born with Down syndrome, a medical missionary who puts his life on the line treating patients during the Ebola epidemic, a couple who makes the stunning choice to forgive their daughter's killer."

268. Name of Agent: Tanusri Prasanna

Looking for: "Tanusri's background in human rights law has helped shape her eclectic list, which features compelling new voices in the adult and children's books spaces. She looks for accessible and wide-reaching, narrative nonfiction set against themes in social justice and representation; memoirs that speak to these issues with authenticity, humor, and heart; and select fiction featuring diverse perspectives, experiences, and even storytelling styles. For YA and middle-grade, Tanusri gravitates towards contemporary coming-of-age stories, and ambitious, world-building fantasies. She's drawn to charming and relatable romances, well-plotted and voice-driven suspense, and stories set in schools or interesting neighborhoods. In the picture book space, she loves wry humor and twisty endings, as well as meaningful, concept-driven texts. She also represents children's nonfiction that excites the imagination and curiosity of young readers."

269. Name of Agent: Reiko Davis

Looking for: "Reiko's interests are varied, but she is particularly drawn to narrative journalism on the topics of pop culture, science/psychology, and current events as well as memoir that focuses on social justice, issues of race and gender, and the history and experiences of women and people of color. For fiction, she's primarily looking for upmarket and literary novels, specifically set in contemporary times. She loves young, underrepresented voices, magical realism, and voice driven coming-of-age stories. On the children's side, she's actively looking for YA and middle grade projects that aren't afraid to tackle big questions or important emotional truths, and do so through remarkable storytelling, humor, and heart."

"Right now she's especially on the lookout for middle grade nonfiction projects (STEM focused, DIY, inspirational, activist driven, historical) and for adult rom com. She'd also love to connect with promising writers of short fiction with a strong initial publication record with magazines/literary journals who are now at work on a story collection and/or a debut novel.

"She's not looking for adult genre fiction (fantasy, sci-fi, thriller) or nonfiction with a highly prescriptive bent."

Looking for: "She represents vivid literary fiction (be it voicey, historical, speculative, or mysterious), up-market women's fiction, cohesive short story collections, and graphic novels. In young adult, she loves compelling and heartbreaking contemporary novels and speculative high-concepts rooted in science and history. In middle grade, she enjoys novels with a heartfelt, timeless quality, and stories that explore the magic of our world or those imagined. For non-fiction, she is looking for memoirs and narratives that explore greater social issues, dark and weird times in human history, the personal impact of science, and any off-beat topic explored through an academic lens. Across all genres, she's looking for books with a heartbeat, and she'll always be interested in previously under- or misrepresented experiences and stories that contribute to a larger cultural conversation."

276. Name of Agent: Katie Kotchman

Looking for: "In non-fiction, she specializes in business (all areas), narrative non-fiction (particularly popular science, pop culture, memoir, and social/cultural issues), and self-help that focuses on success, motivation, and psychology. Katie is actively seeking new nonfiction clients with built-in platforms from whom she can learn something new. In fiction, she's interested in representing women's fiction and literary fiction. In all areas, she's particularly interested in characters who struggle with dualities of nature and/or culture, as the topics of cognitive dissonance and those who straddle two different worlds fascinate her. She has soft spots for the Midwest, family secrets, and a good underdog story. Please do not send her fantasy, sci-fi, screenplays or poetry."

278. Name of Agent: Susan Ramer

Looking for: "She looks for literary fiction, upmarket 'book club' fiction (contemporary and historical, American in particular), and narrative non-fiction. Susan is drawn to an authentic voice, unforgettable characters with an edge, and an unfamiliar, well-crafted story that is emotional in unpredictable ways. For non-fiction, her interests include social history, cultural history, smart pop culture (fashion, food, art, music), women's issues, and literary memoir with a distinctive theme. She particularly likes a narrative that combines a personal thread with reporting and analysis of a broader social or cultural issue. In everything, Susan appreciates a sense of humor, especially when it's on the dark side. Please do not query Susan in the following categories: romance, sci-fi, fantasy, espionage, mysteries, politics, health/diet/fitness, self-help sports or children's (young adult, middle grade or picture book); and she does not represent screenplays."

DONAGHY LITERARY GROUP

279. Name of Agent: Stacey Donaghy

Looking for: "Stacey is interested in receiving queries for Adult and Young Adult fiction. She is particularly interested in domestic suspense, psychological thrillers, romance, women's fiction and contemporary YA. She lives for an unreliable narrator, so if you have one please send it her way! Where thrillers are concerned she is only interested in psychological thrillers and is not currently seeking other types. Hoping to see more #ownvoices and diverse works both in Adult and YA."

280. Name of Agent: Valerie Noble

Looking for: "Valerie loves science fiction that explores what the world might look like tomorrow as in Station Eleven by Emily St. John Mandel or A Boy and His Dog at the End of the World by C.A. Fletcher.

"She also loves fantasy that mixes with the real world or is non-euro centric like the forthcoming Daughter of the Moon Goddess by Sue Lynn Tan (Harper Voyager).

"Valerie loves novels utilizing epistolary elements as in Devolution by Max Brooks, Sleeping Giants by Sylvain Neuvel, and A Tale for the Time Being by Ruth Ozeki.

"While Valerie is always looking for diversity in her projects she is generally not drawn to big issue books, but rather the everyday struggles and joys of family, culture, and coming of age. Stories featuring sibling dynamics, anti-heroes, and a bit of romance in any form are always welcome.

"In general, Valerie is not a fan of time travel stories, superheroes, books set during World War II or the Civil War, or stories where dreams play a starring role."

284. Name of Agent: Katie Shea Boutillier

Looking for: "Katie focuses on commercial adult fiction and young adult fiction. She is always on the hunt for upmarket women's fiction, psychological suspense and has a soft spot for coming-of-age fiction. She loves books that present big hooks, imperfect characters, and strong voices. Katie is committed to help achieve her clients' long-term career goals.

"NEW AS OF APRIL 2021! I am now accepting queries for middle grade novels. I am focusing on contemporary coming-of-age stories with strong voices, complex friendships, family drama, high stakes and lots of emotional arcs. I would love to find a new voice in middle grade fiction to breakout into the market."

289. Name of Agent: Jennifer Goloboy

Looking for: "Jennie is particularly looking for fun, innovative, diverse, and progressive science fiction and fantasy for adults. She thinks that one of the most important jobs of science fiction is to imagine a future we want to live in.

"As a fan of character-driven novels, she wants to be desperate to know what happens to your hero by the time she's finished your writing sample. Romance and humor are always a plus. If your book combines an oddball premise with a compelling protagonist, she wants to read it. Adorable body horror? Quirky intentional communities? Please send them on!

"Jennie is also looking for history for a popular, adult audience. She's a particular fan of histories of an idea, and narratives about early America. She is not interested in historical novels, or in memoir."

295. Name of Agent: Leslie Zampetti

Looking for: "For children's books, Leslie seeks middle grade and young adult novels, especially mysteries and contemporary fiction. Historical fiction with a specific hook to the time and place, novels in verse, and off-the-beaten-path romances are on her wish list. For picture books, Leslie prefers nonfiction that tells a story almost too good to be true, stories that show everyday diversity to mirror under-represented readers and open windows to others (per Dr. Rudine Sims Bishop), witty wordplay, and dry, sly humor. Drawn to books about Florida, odd homes, and kids with book smarts and big hearts, Leslie is highly selective.

"For adult fiction, Leslie is interested in literary mysteries, upmarket romance with interfaith or marginalized couples, and historical fiction set in regions other than Europe and North America. For nonfiction, Leslie finds narrative nonfiction that straddles the boundaries between crime, memoir, and literature especially appealing. An armchair adventurer, Leslie enjoys experiencing wild places and extreme challenges from the comfort of her chair. Though she reads widely, she's not a fit for political thrillers, inspirational Christian fiction, memoirs about violence against women, or hard sci-fi."

EAST-WEST AGENCY

330. Name of Agent: Deborah Warren

Looking for: "... she represents authors and illustrators—both debut and established—in the board book, concept, novelty, multicultural, non-fiction, middle-grade and young adult markets.

"Deborah's looking to fall in love with character-driven stories with heart, enhanced by a hook, told in a unique, fresh or distinctive way. Her sweet spots: short, quirky picture books and smartly layered, memorable and insightful MG and YA fiction. And she LOVES finding debut talent – in fact, it's a bit of a specialty for the Agency."

334. Name of Agent: Susan Graham

Looking for: "Susan's looking for children's and young adult fiction in all genres, but their favorite books are often science fiction and fantasy, especially written with a queer lens. They also enjoy picture books and represent graphic novels in all age categories and in all genres. They're particularly interested in friendships and sibling narratives, and monster protagonists are always a plus. They're looking for a good non-fiction or two for children or teens but don't know about what. For adult prose, they prefer genre fiction, and monster protagonists are still a plus. Works by and about marginalized voices are welcome and encouraged."

335. Name of Agent: Paloma Hernando

Looking for: "Paloma's favorite books often have a bit of magic in them, and she loves being able to dive into any world, real or invented, presented on the page. She is looking for both graphic novels and prose fiction for YA or adult, including more mature stories, particularly ones that deal with difficult emotions and nuanced characters. She loves romance, particularly queer romance, science fiction that feels fresh, high fantasy, and middle grade with a good sense of humor. She is interested in non-fiction for all ages, especially anything that digs into media analysis or an event in history. She loves a story with a strong voice and solid construction."

341. Name of Agent: Caitlin White

Looking for: "Caitlin is looking for whodunnits that harken back to Agatha Christie (think: Maureen Johnson's Truly Devious series), pretty much anything that makes her feel like summer (her favorite book is Judy Blume's Summer Sisters), rom-coms with an original hook, stories about non-toxic groups of friends, magical realism that feels grounded (like Anna-Marie McLemore's When the Moon Was Ours), unabashedly feminist POVs, and contemporary witches set in a real-life world, like These Witches Don't Burn by Isabel Sterling. (If it's similar to The Craft or Practical Magic, she will likely read it.) She is always interested in seeing submissions from BIPOC and LGBTQ+ authors. Sorry, but she is not the right person for high fantasy."

FAIRBANK LITERARY REPRESENTATION

356. Name of Agent: Sorche Elizabeth Fairbank

Looking for: "Our tastes tend toward literary and international fiction; voice-y novels with a strong sense of place; big memoir that goes beyond the me-moir; topical or narrative nonfiction with a strong interest in women's voices, global perspectives, and class and race issues; children's picture books & middle grade from illustrator/artists only; quality lifestyle books (food, wine, and design); pop culture; craft; and gift and humor books. We are most likely to pick up works that are of social or cultural significance, newsworthy, or that cause us to take great delight in the words, images, or ideas on the page.

"Lately we have been doing extremely well in the humor/gift/pop culture category, international fiction, and children's picture books by illustrator artists, and we'd love to take on more projects in those categories. Above all, we look for a fresh voice, approach, story, or idea."

361. Name of Agent: Bobby O'Neil

Looking for: "Bobby is looking for middle grade and young adult fiction across the board ranging from the grounded to the fantastic. In adult fiction, he is primarily interested in fantasy and speculative fiction that push the conventions of the genre, and character-driven commercial fiction. For nonfiction, he loves a strong narrative and is especially partial to memoir and historical. He is drawn to powerful voices and unique points of view that tell the stories from underrepresented communities."

Read more: <https://fineprintlit.com/bobby-oneil.html>

362. Name of Agent: Laura Wood

Looking for: "Laura specializes in serious nonfiction, especially in the areas of science and nature, along with substantial titles in history and other areas by academics, experienced professionals, and journalists. Laura enjoys hanging out with scientists and academics in general and believes in bringing their findings to a wide audience. Her client list includes NASA scientists, animal behavior experts, paleontologists, physicists, and award-winning science journalists, among others.

"Laura is also developing a select list in genre fiction only (no poetry, literary fiction or memoir) in the categories of Science Fiction & Fantasy and Mystery. Preference given to SFWA and MWA members."

FLETCHER & COMPANY

365. Name of Agent: Christy Fletcher

Looking for: "I'm very selective about taking on new clients at this point, but when I do it's non-fiction that uses narrative to teach and explore worlds and ideas, by someone who comes to their point of view via journalism, experience or research, or in fiction, I love unique voices and stories that have urgency. I want to feel from page one that the writer is in charge and that I'm moving through the book with emotional investment."

Recent sales: <https://www.publishersmarketplace.com/dealmakers/detail.cgi?id=581>

366. Name of Agent: Melissa Chinchillo

Looking for: "I have a wide range of interests when it comes to non-fiction: from popular philosophy, science and psychology, to serious history, soft business, self-help and quirky gift books. I'm continually growing more interested in health, fitness and wellness and would like to work with more authors in this area. I work with many academics and historians and am open to projects in which the author is branching out from an academic audience to reach a broader trade market.

"For fiction, I'm drawn to stories with a dark, suspenseful, philosophical or mysterious bent. They tend to be literary thrillers, mysteries or crime fiction (but not always) and could be literary or commercial, adult or YA. I'm intrigued by supernatural or fantastical elements (not high fantasy) woven into great writing, like the sensibility of Kelly Link, Karen Russell or Jonathan Howard."

370. Name of Agent: Lisa Grubka

Looking for: "My list is split fairly evenly between fiction and non-fiction. I work with a wide range of authors, from debut novelists to seasoned bestsellers. In fiction, I'm looking for literary, upmarket, historical, literary suspense, and YA. I grew up in Michigan and went to the University of Michigan, so I have a soft spot for Midwestern settings (and a strong sense of place in general). I am often drawn to novels set in “contained” environments (campuses, unique communities, etc), family sagas, and those that explore complex friendships. I can fall in love with the writing and voice (especially unique and diverse voices) but also appreciate page-turning momentum. For non-fiction, I look for narrative, science, food/cookbooks, lifestyle/health, and current events. I'm generally interested in non-fiction that will help readers live better, more fulfilling lives. I work closely with my authors before submission to make sure we're sending out the best possible book, and every step of the way after that. I love matchmaking my authors with the right editor, with the goal of establishing long careers."

373. Name of Agent: Sarah Fuentes

Looking for: "In fiction, I'm always looking for a distinct narrative voice and fresh prose. I'm particularly drawn to stories that explore the complicated inner-workings of relationships, whether between family members, friends, or romantic partners. I'd love to find something in the vein of Sally Rooney's Normal People, Shelia Heti's Motherhood, Jenny Offill's Dept. of Speculation, or Elif Batuman's The Idiot. I'm also a sucker for a dark, off-beat comedy like Patrick deWitt's French Exit or Ottessa Moshfegh's My Year of Rest and Relaxation.

"On the nonfiction side, I'm interested in voice-driven and literary memoir (like Rachel Cusk, Deborah Levy, or Heidi Julavits), narrative reportage, cultural history and criticism, and history with a surprising point of view. I'm always keen to read work that explores pop culture in a serious, critical way."

374. Name of Agent: Veronica Goldstein

Looking for: "I'm drawn to voices with a new story to tell, especially writers from different parts of the world, Americans whose stories are underrepresented in traditional publishing, and works in translation. A sense of urgency is crucial for me, and writers who engage critically with questions of identity and our collective future (political and economic systems, technology, the climate) are nearest to my heart. In fiction, I look for novels with a contemporary voice that balance the complexities of culture and politics with storytelling that delves deep into the inner worlds of its characters in a way that challenges expectations and deepens the emotional stakes of the story (Zadie Smith, Sheila Heti, Sally Rooney). Autofiction, speculative fiction, and experimental forms are always of interest to me. On the nonfiction side, I'm interested in compelling critical takes on cultural and sociological trends and investigative and issue-focused narrative nonfiction, as well as memoir that makes the personal political and vice versa (Eula Biss, Maggie Nelson)."

390. Name of Agent: Sonali Chanchani

Looking for: "In fiction, I'm looking for character-driven literary fiction and upmarket women's fiction with a strong, distinctive voice. I'm particularly interested in smart, funny novels about identity and coming of age, braided narratives of friendship and/or family, nuanced psychological suspense, and elevated crime fiction. Across the board, I love books that center underrepresented voices and blend emotional depth with sharp, witty insights. I also gravitate towards lyrical, atmospheric stories with tension simmering beneath the surface. In general, I have a soft spot for small towns, quirky characters, historical settings, magical realism, and elements of folklore or mythology.

"In nonfiction, I'm looking for narratives and collections that illuminate some aspect of our society or culture with an eye towards social justice. I'm especially interested in reported narratives that advance our current conversations about race, class, gender, and/or politics.

"An advocate for authors from marginalized communities, I'm keen to represent a diversity of voices."

391. Name of Agent: Dado Derviskadic

Looking for: "In non-fiction, I am interested primarily in: cultural history and biography (journalists or historians bringing us an irreplaceable, in-depth view of a fascinating figure, time or place, especially in the worlds of art, film and food); memoir (especially, but not exclusively, of the globe-trotting sort, personal stories that help explain the world around the author); pop science and motivational self-help (especially if it has to do with memory, finding and sculpting your best self, food, health/nutrition, or language); pop culture (especially where it intersects with "nerd cultures" of all kinds); and cookbooks (from healthy food hacks to gloriously illustrated haute cuisine and anything in between).

"In fiction, my tastes lean towards to the gritty, introspective and serious. Plot is less important than mood and thought, and I'd rather be taken on an intellectual roller coaster than to a heart-warming, neatly-wrapped ending."

410. Name of Agent: Gordon Warnock

Looking for: "Non-fiction: I'm looking for large-platform projects in which the book represents something bigger than the book itself, of which you are the expert, the one best fit to bring it to the page. I prefer to work with socially-responsible books that raise new issues or illuminate common issues in new ways. I love books with strong charity tie-ins and celebrities coming together to promote a good cause on a large scale.

"Fiction: I'm looking for fresh concepts that excite me before I even start reading and tension-filled prose that won't let me stop. Plot is very important, as is an authentic voice that makes me believe your protagonist is a real person."

413. Name of Agent: Emily S. Keyes

Looking for: "Emily loves reading books that make her feel like she is entering someone else's brain. Voice and emotion are very important to hook her on a project. She loves all types of young adult and middle grade books. Her #MSWL right now includes a diverse YA fantasy in a non-western setting, particularly those based on real historical periods, middle grade stories that kids will WANT to read (if your goal is to "teach kids stuff", I probably don't want to read it), upmarket women's fiction, and unique science fiction and fantasy.

"Emily is also looking for a select list of commercial fiction which includes fantasy & science fiction, women's fiction, along with pop culture and humor titles. She is not looking for poetry, short stories, screenplays or anything that is "publishable" and not amazing."

420. Name of Agent: Marietta B. Zacker

Looking for: “She is always on the lookout for visual and narrative stories that reflect the world we live in, not the bubbles in which we put ourselves. She loves books that make readers feel and shies away from those that set out to teach the reader a lesson. Whether she is reading a young adult novel, a middle grade novel or a picture book, Marietta looks for a book in which young readers can identify with the actions and reactions of the characters, not the perspectives of the author or illustrator. Diversity in the story must be inherent and authentic, not trendy. She is thrilled to shine the spotlight on soulful, insightful, well-crafted, literary or commercial projects aimed at any age group from young adult to the youngest of readers.”

470. Name of Agent: Josh Getzler

Looking for: "Josh is particularly into foreign and historical fiction; both women's fiction (your Downton Abbey/Philippa Gregory Mashups), straight ahead historical fiction (think Wolf Hall or The Road to Wellville); and thrillers and mysteries (The Alienist, say; or Donna Leon or Arianna Franklin). He'd LOVE a strong French Revolution novel. So send in your ruthless doges and impious cardinals...and your farmhouse cozies! (He does love cozies...) Give him atmosphere, let him learn something about another time or another place (or both), and kill off nasty Uncle Mortimer in the process—Josh will be yours!

"Josh has also been taking on a significant amount of middle grade fiction, which has been a particular sweet spot. Settings that are just a little off seem to be a real favorite, along with contemporary/funny books about kids. Not so much high fantasy or science fiction, and definitely not picture books. (There are many others who specialize in these books, including Carrie Hannigan at HG.) Please don't send religious fiction—he doesn't have contacts in the Christian book market.

"In nonfiction, he's very interested in increasing his list in history (including micro-histories), business, and political thought—but not screeds."

471. Name of Agent: Soumeya Bendimerad Roberts

Looking for: "In fiction, Soumeya is seeking literary and upmarket novels and collections, and also represents realistic young-adult and middle-grade. She likes books with vivid voices and compelling, well-developed story-telling, and is particularly interested in fiction that reflects on the post-colonial world and narratives by people of color. A lover of craft, she is drawn to observant writing that illuminates dynamic relationships between complex but sympathetic characters, intelligent experiments with form, and stories that enchant and transport the reader in inventive ways.

"In non-fiction, she is primarily looking for idea-driven or voice-forward memoirs, personal essay collections, and approachable narrative non-fiction of all stripes: politics, current events; popular culture, especially anything that deals with subcultures (the more minute the better); unconventional business; popular science; adventure; psychology; and more. She also represents a select list of practical nonfiction in cooking, design, craft, gardening, travel and the outdoors, humor, health, and parenting."

474. Name of Agent: Rhea Lyons

Looking for: <https://www.publishersmarketplace.com/dealmakers/detail.cgi?id=66793>

Read more: <https://www.hgliterary.com/rhea>

Recent sales: "Rhea is looking for writers who want to confront and destroy the status quo, both within the frame of fiction and nonfiction. For fiction, Rhea is looking for literary/commercial crossover (bonus if it has a speculative bend) as well as science fiction, fantasy, and romance -- both true to the genre as well as genre-busting -- told in an accessible, entertaining voice. She is very much looking for horror written by women, and would love a sweeping, setting-focused soap opera-esque family drama. For nonfiction, Rhea is looking for narrative nonfiction and journalistic deep-dives into a single subject, particular location, or that examines a moment in history from an underrepresented, international, or little-known point of view. For children's books and young adult, Rhea is especially interested in novels about girls who play sports for the sake of sports. Actually, Rhea will probably automatically love any story that focuses on women involved in athletics."

475. Name of Agent: Jon Cobb

Looking for: "Jon reads all genres of fiction but has a particular interest in contemporary middle grade and YA, adult science fiction and fantasy, African-American fiction, literary fiction, and mysteries and thrillers."

489. Name of Agent: Cassie Mannes Murray

Looking for: "Because she believes genre categories are for marketing purposes, Cassie would like to work with authors who are difficult to categorize, or are attempting to bridge gaps between multiple genre categories. She wants to work with writers that are passionate about writing, particularly at the sentence level. While she can become invested in a wide-range of books, topics that are always a hit for her include: reckoning with girlhood or coming-of-age in adult narratives, slipstream, strange, or left-of-center fiction (Karen Russell, Kelly Link, Helen Oyeyemi), retellings of obscure fairytales, folklore (particularly from nonwestern traditions), manipulative or unlikeable characters, LGBTQ+ narratives, odd jobs, education, climate science, and anything that centers Southern culture.

"Cassie is accepting submissions for adult fiction and nonfiction. As far as fiction, she is seeking literary fiction, upmarket commercial fiction, short story collections, and literary-speculative work (not high fantasy or science fiction). For nonfiction, she's interested in representing memoir, essay collections, as well as narrative nonfiction."

490. Name of Agent: Mariah Stovall

Looking for: "As an agent, she responds to a writer's voice first and foremost, and is always looking for intersectionality and interdisciplinary perspectives, especially from people with marginalized identities. Great writing can get her interested in any topic but her evergreens are: music, mental health/illness, Black America, linguistics, history of objects and ideas, pop science, and deep dives into subcultures and social movements. She wants to learn something from everything she reads, whether that's a new way to structure a novel or a piece of history she wasn't taught in school. She gravitates toward dark, challenging stories, black comedy and unlikable characters.

"Mariah is accepting submissions of adult fiction and nonfiction. For fiction, she is seeking literary fiction, upmarket commercial fiction and short story collections. For nonfiction, she is seeking narrative nonfiction, essay collections and memoir. She would like to work with writers for their entire careers and loves if someone can write both fiction and nonfiction."

IRENE GOODMAN LITERARY AGENCY

529. Name of Agent: Irene Goodman

Looking for: "She is particularly interested in fiction that hits the sweet spot between literary and commercial -- it's a captivating story, it has something important to say, it's not hard to read, and it's beautifully structured and written. It can be women's fiction, an intelligent thriller, a fun mystery, historical fiction, or middle grade and young adult fiction. She is avidly interested in non-fiction focusing on pop culture, music, science, Francophilia, Judaica, and lifestyle. Non-fiction can be for adults, young adults, or middle grade."

530. Name of Agent: Miriam Kriss

Looking for: "Miriam is open to all genres of commercial fiction, from picture books through adult. She's especially on the hunt for female driven epic fantasy and thrillers, diverse voices in YA and MG, and any novel that pulls her in and makes her forget she's reading. Basically, if it's fun to read she probably represents it. She's incredibly selective in her non-fiction projects but has been known to jump on the right one."

532. Name of Agent: Kim Perel

Looking for: "She is actively looking for engaging, voice-driven literary fiction with a strong plot (from quirky family sagas to an ensemble casts of characters), beachy reads, rom-coms with a twist, and commercial fiction that's impossible to put down. She is also interested in nonfiction from established experts and influencers alike in the areas of lifestyle, wellness, memoir, politics and reportage and research-driven narrative nonfiction."

533. Name of Agent: Victoria Marini

Looking for: "Victoria is looking for commercial and literary Middle Grade and Young Adult fiction as well as upmarket commercial or literary Adult fiction. She represents contemporary, mystery & thrillers, suspense, fantasy, sci-fi, magical realism, horror, and very select narrative non-fiction. Victoria would not be the best fit for prescriptive non-fiction, debut memoir, new age/religious/spirituality, popular science, new adult, or regency romances."

534. Name of Agent: Whitney Ross

Looking for: "Whitney represents middle grade, young adult, and adult fiction across all genres, with an emphasis on historical, SF & fantasy, romance, and contemporary fiction. She is also open to non-fiction submissions in the areas of design, cooking, and fashion.

"Whitney loves to read novels set in unusual time periods and locations, whether that involves a fantastical element or not. She is rarely able to resist the trickster king motif, and has a weakness for read-between-the-lines subtle romances. And she can't wait to be surprised by tropes turned upside down, and unusual takes on old favorites. Yet she's constantly surprised by books not on her "wish list," and is always open to stories with compelling characters and emotionally involving plotlines."

535. Name of Agent: Pam Gruber

Looking for: "Pam is looking for adult, young adult, and middle grade fiction with literary voices and commercial hooks. She is particularly interested in layered fantasy, speculative fiction, fantastical realism, rom-coms, and coming-of-age stories with a twist. She is also open to middle grade and YA graphic novels, as well as select narrative non-fiction on lesser-known subjects. Pam would not be the best fit for prescriptive non-fiction, anthologies, potty humor, paranormal, or erotica."

Read more: <https://www.irenegoodman.com/pam-gruber>

536. Name of Agent: Maggie Kane

Looking for: "She's currently interested in young adult and character-driven fiction. She can't resist a twist of the fantastical in unexpected places, and her reading interests are varied, from magical realism and fantasy/science fiction to idiosyncratic family sagas and literary suspense. She'll happily follow a compelling voice wherever it leads."

Read more: <https://www.irenegoodman.com/maggie-kane>

537. Name of Agent: Lee O'Brien

Looking for: "Across all age categories, they're looking for books with clear stakes and an immersive world, as well as anything with lots of atmosphere, magic, monsters, intrigue, or a plot full of twists and turns. They're actively seeking underrepresented voices, and they have a particular soft spot for queer romance (whether it's an epic love story or a first crush), ace rep, and trans kids with swords."

Read more: <https://www.irenegoodman.com/lee-obrien>

538. Name of Agent: Margaret Danko

Looking for: "Margaret is actively looking for attention-grabbing voices especially literary fiction with teeth, historical fiction with a dash of magical realism, fresh literary and commercial suspense, spooky contemporary and fantasy YA, narratives with a deep sense of place and history, quirky and heartwarming family stories, and rom-coms full of charm and whimsy. She is also interested in nonfiction in the areas of humor, lifestyle, popular science, health/wellness, true crime, politics, and current affairs. She does not represent Middle Grade or picture books.”

540. Name of Agent: Eddie Schneider

Looking for: "Major changes are underway here in the U.S., both in terms of reading technology and demographics, and any time something comes along to disrupt the status quo, it presents huge artistic and economic opportunities. This dovetails nicely with what I desire most—books that are groundbreaking, genre-defining, and reflect the whole spectrum of human experience.

"No matter the genre, I have a strong interest in working with authors who bring fresh and diverse voices to the literary conversation, especially those who come from historically marginalized groups. All people should be able to see themselves reflected in the stories they read, as well as in those who pen them."

Looking for: "Adult Science-Fiction: Space opera in the vein of Ian M. Banks' Culture series, military SF like Campbell's the Lost Fleet, near-future tales like Cixin's Three Body Problem, and flat-out weird like Borne by VanderMeer.

"Adult Fantasy: From epics like Brandon Sanderson's the Stormlight Archive to one-offs such as Joe Abercrombie's The Heroes and pretty much everything high and low in between.

"Non-Fiction: Anything with a gripping topic and a compelling voice."

542. Name of Agent: Lisa Rodgers

Looking for: "Fantasy and Science Fiction: Complex magical/technological/political/social systems and cohesive worldbuilding are all good things in my book, as are moral quandaries and ambiguity. I'm also very interested in seeing female protagonists, non-Western settings, and protagonists from marginalized groups. I'm particularly drawn to characters whose struggles include not just "the quest", but also choices that challenge their beliefs or values, or how technology/magic can affect what it means to be human. I love SFF of all stripes, from epic fantasy to grimdark to space opera and military SF. Large-scale stories are fantastic, but I'm also very interested in smaller-scale stories, where the focus is on a particular group of characters and not necessarily the fate of the galaxy.

"Horror: You know that scene from Friends where Rachel is reading The Shining and nearly brains Joey with a potato masher when he startles her? I'm looking for horror submissions that evoke that feeling. I love horror that goes a little left of center, whether it's mostly contemporary with a hint of supernatural or more firmly speculative. Birdbox (the book), Get Out, A Quiet Place, and The Haunting of Hill House are all great examples of what I'm looking for. I want to read these under the covers with a flashlight and be terrified!

"Romance: The heroine and hero's developing relationship and how they overcome obstacles in order to achieve their happily-ever-after really drive these stories for me. I like to see heroines and heroes with equal power and respect for one another. While I prefer historical settings, I'm looking for that special contemporary romance.

"I'm also interested in YA fantasy, horror, science fiction, thriller, and romance.

"I'm particularly fond of non-traditional narrative structures: epistolary, non-linear, found-document, etc.

"Non-fiction: I would love to see non-fiction proposals for craft-related subjects! Knitting, crochet, quilting, sewing, or other sorts of handicrafts are very much in my wheelhouse. I'm interested in both pattern collections and reflections on crafting (a la YARN HARLOT). I'm also looking for select gift book projects."

543. Name of Agent: Bridget Smith

Looking for: "Middle grade fiction: I'm interested in middle grade in all genres. I love dry humor, complex emotions felt for the first time, kids who solve their own problems, and a voice that makes kids feel respected. I particularly love high-concept stories told in a literary style.

"Young adult fiction: I also work on all genres of YA. I have a soft spot for layered, emotional contemporary, preferably with more than an ounce of humor; sophisticated and unusual SFF; vivid, immersive historical fiction about lesser-known stories; and anything that blends or bends genre. I love books about teenagers having complicated feelings, girls who try hard but mess up, clever concepts handled in an unusual way, and a voice that makes me feel like I know the character personally.

"Science fiction and fantasy: I tend to prefer the more literary side of the genre: the first things that grab me are character and voice.

"Fantasy was one of my first loves, and I'm interested in a wide variety of novels. I particularly like stories where the characters drive the plot and the worldbuilding shapes the characters. I'm not particularly into grimdark or urban fantasy, but anything else is fair game.

"In science fiction, I'm particularly looking for anything that makes me feel like SHARDS OF HONOUR by Lois McMaster Bujold: intimately human on a galactic scope.

"Literary fiction: I tend to prefer literary fiction that includes elements of other genres or an interesting structure. I'm particularly interested in historical fiction about women, people of color, and LGBTQ people. Some non-client favorites include THE ESSEX SERPENT by Sarah Perry, POSSESSION by A.S. Byatt, FINGERSMITH by Sarah Waters, and THE GOLEM AND THE JINNI by Helene Wecker. I'm also interested in contemporary fiction with a speculative element and/or a strong plot (a la Alice Hoffman or Tana French)."

554. Name of Agent: Rebecca Carter

Looking for: “She represents both fiction and non-fiction, bringing her long editorial and publishing experience to bear on all aspects of the publication process.

“In fiction, she is looking for ground-breaking new literary fiction writers, as well as writers of upmarket crime and thrillers, and some children’s and YA authors. She has very varied taste in fiction, enjoying the spare and the dark as well as the rich and linguistically playful; the big family drama alongside the smaller prose poem; the bitingly contemporary as well as the reflectively historical; novels set in worlds already familiar, as well as those opening up different, distant lives and places. In non-fiction, her curiosity and tastes are similarly broad but she works mainly in the fields of history, politics, social and cultural commentary, design and technology, the environment and travel, often mixed together with memoir, and with a strong emphasis on quality of writing and storytelling.”

Looking for: “On the non-fiction side, and at this moment in time, I’m particularly keen to represent more books about the natural world and our co-existence with it (whether that be popular science, biology, ecology or nature writing); books that celebrate women in science; books that help us understand the world and bring change; and creative nonfiction that blends genres.

“On the fiction side, I read widely but naturally gravitate towards atmospheric, character-driven novels that are rooted to a strong sense of place and I’m just as happy hunkering down to Malorie Blackman, Maria Semple or Maggie O’Farrell as I am to Jenny Offill, Mohsin Hamid or Bernadine Evaristo.”

557. Name of Agent: Julia Eagleton

Looking for: “In nonfiction her taste is wide-ranging, including business, economics, politics and current affairs, history, psychology, memoir, and cultural criticism. She tends towards books that engage with big questions about our collective future (for example the environment, tech, healthcare, and social justice). Equally, she loves to work with creative nonfiction writers who blend poetry with essay or memoir.

“In fiction she is most excited by writers who have a distinctive voice and fresh perspective. She is looking to champion international stories and her favourite novels often bring together the private and the public in order to critically examine the world right now. She is also drawn to narratives with a strong sense of atmosphere and that exist on the boundary between the real and magical.”

JENNIFER DE CHIARA LITERARY AGENCY

565. Name of Agent: Jennifer De Chiara

Looking for: "Adult Fiction: I'm passionate about literary fiction with a unique, beautiful voice, but I also enjoy commercial fiction, women's fiction (no bodice-rippers, please), chick-lit, mysteries, suspense, thrillers - in general, I'm open to manuscripts in every category. I'm a sucker for underdog and outsider stories, manuscripts about the triumph of the human spirit. I want to read manuscripts that will keep me up at night, make me feel something, change the world in some way. Even if it's a fun, commercial story, at its heart should be a wonderful protagonist from whom I can learn.

"Children's Fiction: I love all kinds of picture books - soft, quirky, funny - rhyming or non-rhyming. For middle-grade and YA fiction, I'm looking for beautiful, distinctive voices, above all, and character-driven stories. I'm open to every genre under the sun, but I'm not a huge science fiction fan.

"Non-fiction: Being a former dancer/actress, I love anything and everything Hollywood, especially celebrity bios/autobiographies. I'm always looking for beautifully written memoirs about people who have overcome incredible odds, books about the arts and performing arts, behind-the-scenes-type books, and books about popular culture. I am passionate about books that empower people to live their best lives, whether it's a great health or exercise book or a spiritual-type (think Eckhart Tolle or Deepak Chopra) book, and self-help books of all kinds. I am particularly open to books for the GLBTQ audience and, in general, any underdog/outsider stories. I'd love to see just about any well-written book on any topic; if you're in doubt, just query me."

566. Name of Agent: Megan Barnard

Looking for: "Adult Fiction:

"Historical- I particularly want historical fiction in the vein of Kate Morton, Kate Atkinson, and Susanna Kearsley. I prefer time periods after the 19th century (but will consider others). I also love what I think of as "historical fiction with magic". Think Circe, The Snow Child, Life After Life, A Secret History of Witches. I'd LOVE to find anything like these books.

"Women's Fiction- upmarket or commercial is fine.

"Literary and upmarket- wonderful prose, but a strong commercial hook is important too. Think The Good People, The Secret Chord, or My Grandmother Asked Me to Tell You She's Sorry.

"Family Sagas- I come from a big family, so I have a soft spot for stories about big families and/or sister/sibling relationships.

"Thrillers- in the vein of The Beloveds, The Girl on the Train, Gone Girl (I love unreliable narrators). I'm looking for psychological suspense over gore. A little blood is fine, a lot, not so much.

"Fairy tale retellings- I'm quite picky about these, they need to be new and fresh, but I love retellings that turn old fairy tales on their heads (think The Hazel Wood, Snow Glass Apples). I'd particularly love to find retellings outside the well-known western canon. Fairy tales/stories from all cultures are welcomed and encouraged.

“Adult Non-Fiction: I'm very picky about my non-fiction, and I'm only looking for narrative non-fiction right now. I particularly love memoirs that show beauty that comes out of adversity or pain, like Once More We Saw Stars by Jayson Greene, The Salt Path by Raynor Winn, and Educated by Tara Westover. I'm also interested in nature writing like that of Robert Macfarlane and John Lewis-Stempel. If you have something that combines memoir with nature writing like Amy Liptrot's The Outrun, I definitely want to see it.”

Across the board, I'm always looking for stories by traditionally underrepresented authors. BIPOC, LGBTQIA+, neurodiverse, and disabled, #ownvoices authors are highly encouraged to query me.”

568. Name of Agent: Savannah Brooks

Looking for: “I mainly represent kid-lit (PB, MG, and YA), and I'm interested in books that focus on friendship, conflicting identity, and the theme of truth. I'm always drawn in by a protagonist venturing into a realm where society says they don't belong (think swapping gender norms), and characters with weird obsessions are a weird obsession of mine—teach me strange new things, and I'm yours. I'm all about magical realism, non-western mythology, and modern retellings, but I'm not the best fit for high fantasy or science fiction.”

569. Name of Agent: Erin Clyburn

Looking for: “My favorite books—MG, YA, and adult—are those that are set in our world but with elements of weird: Karen Thompson Walker’s The Dreamers and The Age of Miracles, Marisha Pessl’s Neverworld Wake, The Strange and Beautiful Sorrows of Ava Lavender by Leslye Walton, Catherine House by Elisabeth Thomas, Kevin Wilson’s Nothing to See Here, The Riverman by Aaron Starmer. Please send me your weirds!

“I love stories about food, stories with lots of food, good descriptions of food, etc.

“An Alabamian, I would love to see diverse Southern voices writing stories set in the South.

“Across the board, I am looking for projects from underrepresented writers.”

570. Name of Agent: Zabé Ellor

Looking for: “Middle Grade: I'm now open to MG and excited to find clients writing exciting, adventurous, hilarious books for preteens! My favorite middle grade books weave voice, whimsy, and heart together to meet young readers where they are, instead of talking down or patronizing. I love all things speculative, from wild new worlds to small hints of magic, and my dream would be to find something that innovates at world building how Gregor the Overlander does. I also love stories grounded in the contemporary world, but prefer humorous tones to the very serious. Projects with graphic elements always welcome. I'm especially interested in seeing submissions from diverse voices.

Young Adult: I love all genres of YA: swoonworthy romances, electrifying thrillers and mysteries, heartbreaking contemporaries, and SFF that sweeps me off to a new world. Whatever you're writing, give me flawed characters who struggle with the complexities of growing up and tangled networks of relationships binding them together. Books with messy, real, and consuming emotions are my kryptonite; recent favorites include Three Dark Crowns, Burning Glass, The Astonishing Color of After, When Dimple Met Rishi, Eliza and her Monsters, When the Moon was Ours, and The Love Interest.

Adult Fiction: My first love is adult SFF, in which I'm drawn to expansive worlds inhabited by unforgettable characters. Favorites of mine include the Emberverse series, The Broken Earth trilogy, An Unkindness of Ghosts, and Steven Brust's Vlad Taltos novels. I'm also looking for commercial and upmarket contemporary fiction, especially projects that contain elements of literary mystery and thriller, or voice-driven projects that would make a fun beach—think Little Fires Everywhere, Crazy Rich Asians, or Big Little Lies. Any project that involves rich people, secrets, and tragicomic misbehavior is quick to catch my eye!

Graphic novels: I'm interested in graphic novel projects for all age groups. Give me children's projects that will make me laugh, cry, or both: think The Prince and the Dressmaker, The Witch Boy, or anything by Dav Pilkey. Give me adult projects that can ONLY be told in graphic novel format—stories like Saga and Low where the art creates the world. Author/illustrators strongly preferred.

Nonfiction: In nonfiction, I want proposals for books about science and history that teach and entertain in equal measure. If you want to dive deeply into an intriguing quirk of our world—and can do so with voice, wit, and an eye for the human—I want to see your proposal! As a former evolutionary biology/Renaissance literature major, my interests are wide, but I'll always be interested in projects about fossils. Show me your platform and your passion for the subject.

Diversity is incredibly important to me. I strongly encourage marginalized authors to self-identify, if they are comfortable, especially if their identity is related to their project.

573. Name of Agent: Amy Giuffrida

Looking for: “I am always looking for #ownvoices stories written by traditionally underrepresented authors that feature BIPOC and LGBTQ+ characters.

“MIDDLE-GRADE AND YA: Horror- Give me your dark and twisted tales that make me question reality. I am especially looking for stories set around Halloween, since this is my favorite time of year—ghosts and hauntings with themes of friendship. I also love campy stories full of tropes, so send them my way!

“Romance- Remember your first kiss? I really want to see sweet first love stories. I want to feel that wave of butterflies first love creates and the awkwardness of a first kiss or that tension of having a crush—no matter the type of coupling (F/F, M/M, or F/M).

“Contemporary- I’m always in search of strong, young characters that fight to change the world. Also, enemies to friends, friendship break-ups, and feel good family stories are always at the top of my #MSWL—think MG or YA Schitt’s Creek.

“Mystery- I’d love to see stories including a group of teens that band together to solve puzzles and mysteries. Think of a modern day Goonies or Scooby-Doo with diverse characters.

“ADULT

“Horror- I want scary, smart stories.

“Romance/Rom Com- Give me books that make me swoon, laugh, and cry all at the same time. Stories of best friends turned lovers makes me super happy, no matter the coupling. I’d love to see more of true love stemming from blind dates and making it in the face of diversity. I also seek f/f love stories—give me RED WHITE & ROYAL BLUE, but with female characters. Would also LOVE to see some stories set during holidays in non-Western settings.

“Psychological Thrillers- Give me all the unreliable narrators and unexpected twists and turns.

“NONFICTION

“MG, YA, and Adult- I am looking for powerful stories from diverse voices, including cookbooks that highlight family stories or ancestral anecdotes.”

575. Name of Agent: Tori Sharp

Looking for: “Please send me all genres of children’s graphic novels. I love comics that are heartfelt and gestural, and I tend to like art styles that look animated and soft, but bright. I would jump at a raw but playful MG graphic memoir or stories that feel like fairy tales. Some of my favorite comics are Catboy, Crush, Nimona, Fake Blood, The Prince and the Dressmaker, On a Sunbeam, and Check, Please!

“For middle-grade and young adult prose, my heart is in SFF. PLEASE send me WITCHES! I adore magical realism, and I will consider portal fantasy if it has a strange and fun new take on the genre. Give me something that feels like a campy D&D game—or a TTRPG campaign that literally or metaphorically becomes real. I am also looking for contemporary stories dealing with school struggles, broken homes, mental health, transactional friendships, creativity, reconciliation, geekery, saying “no,” and ambition. I would love a cool and clever spy, heist, or mystery story.

“For nonfiction, I am exclusively looking for MG memoir and how-to books that introduce a craft.”

576. Name of Agent: Roseanne Wells

Looking for: “In all categories, I'm eager to see diverse and underrepresented authors, marginalized stories, and crossing or blending genres.

“Adult Non-fiction: I'm looking for authors who have a unique story to tell with a strong platform, and are dedicated to reaching their audience. I like narrative nonfiction, select memoir, science (popular or trade, not academic), history, travel, humor, food/cooking, pop culture, and similar subjects. I'm also interested non-fiction that has an illustrated or graphic element, humorous take, or an unexplored take on a familiar subject, all with a strong hook and takeaway for the reader.

“Adult Fiction: I'm interested in science-fiction and fantasy; con/heist stories, especially featuring art, jewelry, or tech; and smart detective novels (more Sherlock Holmes than cozy mysteries).

“Children's: I'm eager to see diverse voices and marginalized stories, unique narrative structures that support the story, and unreliable narrators. I'm looking for young adult and middle grade of all genres that connect me to a strong main character and a singular voice.

I'm also open to picture books, especially from author/illustrators. I love cranky, mischievous characters that grow throughout the narrative, and stories that are fun and hilarious for children (and the adults who will read them 500 times). Non-fiction picture books in STEM, science, arts, and biographies are a big plus for me. I'm not interested in rhyming picture books or overly sweet and sentimental stories.”

585. Name of Agent: Katelyn Detweiler

Looking for: “Katelyn is looking for voice and quality writing above all else when she falls in love with a new project.

“On the adult side, she is looking for smart, swoony rom coms and women’s fiction with love that comes in all shapes and sizes; atmospheric ghost stories, thrillers, or mysteries with a strong emotional core and compelling narrators; and sweeping historical and twisty dual-timeline intergenerational sagas. She is also open to narrative non-fiction and memoirs, real stories that are intimate and immersive and as compelling as any novel.

“For YA, Katelyn will always have a soft spot for fresh contemporary with a healthy balance of humor and heart. She’s also drawn to magical realism, fantasy, speculative, historical, and light sci-fi, as long as the characters feel relatable and grounded in the teen experience. The same is true for MG, with a special emphasis on capturing all the weird/funny/sad/hard/awkward/beautiful moments that come with growing up. For both YA and MG, she also likes to see a good family and/or friendship story front and center.

“Katelyn likes picture books that illuminate deeper truths in funny, inspiring, and unconventional ways for young readers, both in fiction and non-fiction.

“In all areas, Katelyn gravitates toward the unusual and the whimsical, hypothetical questions, and ideas that push boundaries and start interesting conversations. She is especially interested in reading work from diverse and underrepresented voices.”

“In Adult, Sam is looking for upmarket fiction of all stripes, but especially historical; fast-paced, high-concept speculative thrillers that make her heart race; lyrical and immersive fantasy; and single-title romance that simmers.

“Sam is also open to Young Adult and Middle Grade of all genres, but she has a special fondness for thoughtful contemporary, often with a speculative twist; historical with modern sensibilities; fantasy with morally gray protagonists and complicated character dynamics; the very strange, and the very funny.

“In all categories and genres, she is looking for diverse and underrepresented voices.”

588. Name of Agent: Larissa Melo Pienkowski

Looking for: “Larissa gravitates toward books featuring a strong voice, emotional depth, and lyrical writing.

“In both adult and children’s fiction, she is looking for stories that center #OwnVoices experiences; dual timelines and multigenerational family sagas; enchantingly fantastical magical realism; haunting, atmospheric queer and non-Western Gothic horror like Carmen Maria Machado’s Her Body and Other Parties and Silvia Moreno-Garcia’s Mexican Gothic; smart, steamy, laugh-out-loud rom-coms with unique twists on tropes; contemporary retellings of non-Western folklore and mythology; vibrant middle-grade novels with strong cultural elements and heartfelt characters; light fantasy in the vein of TJ Klune’s The House in the Cerulean Sea and Trenton Lee Stewart’s The Mysterious Benedict Society; quirky coming-of-age stories featuring BIPOC, disabled, LGBTQ+, fat, and otherwise underrepresented protagonists; and darkly complex mother-daughter, sister-sister, and best friend relationships. She has a soft spot for novels that stretch the boundaries and limitations of genre.

“On the nonfiction side, she is seeking gorgeously evocative narrative nonfiction that blends unique perspectives with pop culture reporting, like Sexographies by Gabriela Wiener; cookbooks that feature diverse cultures and cuisines; Rebecca Solnit-like essay collections that chronicle contemporary life through a lens of social justice, feminism, and liberation; and cultural history and criticism, especially on niche topics having to do with beauty and fashion.

“Larissa is open to contemporary, spoken word-to-page poetry in the vein of Yesika Salgado and Danez Smith, and she is very selectively taking on picture books that are diverse, whimsical, and charming in topic and tone.

“As an advocate for authors from marginalized communities, Larissa is especially interested in representing diverse voices and experiences across all genres.”

KIMBERLEY CAMERON & ASSOCIATES

610. Name of Agent: Kimberley Cameron

Looking for: “She is looking for exceptional writing in any field, particularly writing that touches the heart, and makes us feel something. She's been successful with many different genres, and especially loves the thrill of securing representation for debut authors. She represents both fiction and nonfiction manuscripts, with the exception of romance, children's books and screenplays.”

611. Name of Agent: Elizabeth Kracht

Looking for: “Elizabeth's eclectic life experience drives her interests. She appreciates writing that has depth, an introspective voice, and is thematically layered. Having lived in cities such as New York, San Francisco and San Juan, Puerto Rico, she is compelled by multicultural themes and characters and is drawn toward strong settings.

“In fiction, she represents literary, commercial, women's, thrillers, mysteries, historical, and crossover YA. In nonfiction, she is interested in high concept, health, science, environment, prescriptive, investigative, true crime, voice- or adventure-driven memoir, sexuality, spirituality, and animal/pet stories.”

612. Name of Agent: Amy Cloughley

Looking for: “She enjoys literary and upmarket fiction of all types in addition to commercial—including well-researched historical and well-told women's fiction. She also loves a page-turning mystery or suspense with sharp wit and unexpected twists and turns. She has a soft spot for distinctive, strong, contemporary characters set in small towns. Amy always looks for an unexpected story arc, a suitable pace, and a compelling protagonist.

“She is interested in narrative nonfiction when the plot and characters are immersed in a culture, lifestyle, discipline, or industry. She will also consider a travel or adventure memoir.

“She is not currently focusing on military/government thrillers, fantasy, or YA projects.”

614. Name of Agent: Lisa Abellera

Looking for: “Lisa only represents adult and children's fiction at this time and is looking to build her client list. She responds to well-crafted prose with strong hooks and high personal stakes, complex and sympathetic characters, a tangible sense of place and lush world-building, multicultural aspects, and emotionally-immersive fiction that explores the human condition, especially within family and close relationships. She is actively seeking to champion inclusive stories, especially by BIPOC, #ownvoices, and other authors who identify with marginalized or underrepresented communities.

“Lisa does not represent nonfiction (this includes memoir), translations, poetry collections, picture books, early readers, screenplays or other works of drama, nor does she represent self-published or previously published books.”

635. Name of Agent: Ben Grange

Looking for: “His tastes gravitate towards middle grade fiction, and he is particularly on the lookout for exceptional author-illustrators who write middle grade or young adult. He sometimes gets the inkling to read a great YA sci-fi or fantasy, particularly weird or slightly dark stories (à la The Raven Boys by Maggie Stiefvater). Thanks to his time at JABberwocky, he also loves epic fantasy and science fiction, and although his focus is on middle grade and young adult, he won't say no to a great fantasy or sci-fi. He is also interested in pop culture non-fiction for authors with established platforms.”

640. Name of Agent: Stefanie Molina

Looking for: “Across the board, she is extremely passionate about increasing representation for Black, Indigenous, and people of color communities in publishing, and has a soft spot for stories about mixed people of color. She’s also invested in increasing representation for other marginalized populations, including but not limited to LGBTQIA+ folks, people with disabilities, people with mental illness, and people who are neurodiverse.

“In all works, she loves redemption arcs, especially those that result in enemies-to-lovers.

641. Name of Agent: Trevor Ketner

Looking for: “Adult: memoirs (especially from poets, BIPOC, and LGBTQIA+ folks; i.e. Boy Erased by Garrard Conley and How We Fight for Our Lives by Saeed Jones); General Interest Nonfiction; Literary Fiction (including novels, novellas, fiction experimenting with form; i.e. On Earth We’re Briefly Gorgeous by Ocean Vuong); Historical Fiction in the vein of Colson Whitehead’s The Nickel Boys; Creative Nonfiction (lyric, essays, personal nonfiction all welcome; i.e. Bluets by Maggie Nelson and Time Is the Thing a Body Moves Through by T Fleischmann); Graphic Novels and Memoirs*.

“What they don’t want: Self-Help, Thrillers/Mysteries, or Fantasy

“YA: Historical Fiction (especially about marginalized communities and/or about little-known but important historical events; i.e. The Fountains of Silence by Ruta Sepetys, The War Outside by Monica Hesse, and Like a Love Story by Abdi Nazemian); LGBTQIA YA titles in both fiction and nonfiction (i.e. Brave Face by Shaun David Hutchinson but also especially #OwnVoices narratives about trans and non-binary experience like Birthday by Meredith Russo); thoughtful, original Sports Fiction with nuanced characters and lively on-the-field action (Russo's Birthday is also a great example of this); Graphic Novels and Memoir.”

Looking for: “Lisa’s clients are a diverse list of New York Times, #1 national bestselling and debut authors across many genres. She is always on the lookout for new authors who she and her colleagues can work with to develop their ideas into solid and compelling manuscripts. A self-described “newshound”, Lisa is an avid reader of blogs, social media, newspapers and magazines, in addition to books. Lisa is most passionate about narrative and prescriptive non-fiction, especially on social justice, sports, health, wellness, business, pop-culture, political, and parenting topics. She loves memoirs that transport the reader into another person’s head and give a voyeuristic view of someone else’s extraordinary experiences. Lisa also enjoys literary and commercial fiction and young adult, middle-grade, and children’s books that take the reader on a journey and are just plain fun to read.”

657. Name of Agent: Stephanie Bedingfield

Looking for: “She represents high-concept, genre-busting literary novels, domestic and psychological suspense, upmarket, big-hearted family epics, unique historical fiction, and international, diverse voices.

“She reads most types of literary and upmarket commercial fiction, especially novels that show powerful imagination, compulsive plotting and unexpected points of view that say something important or new. Family dramas, cross-genre narratives with light speculative elements, darker narratives that may lead to nightmares and twisty psychological suspense are her favorite kinds of stories, particularly those set in interesting places. She loves books that highlight nature or the environment, especially in extremes.

“A southerner at heart, she can’t help but gravitate toward books set in the south, but she’s a die-hard for any world immersive enough to make her miss her stop on the train or cry in public.”

Read more: <https://lgrliterary.com/who-we-are/team/sarah-bedingfield/>

658. Name of Agent: Lindsay Edgecombe

Looking for: “Lindsay represents a wide range of titles, including narrative nonfiction, memoir, lifestyle and health, illustrated books, and literary fiction. She is drawn to projects with strong narrators, obscure journeys, and political backbones, but she is an eclectic reader and will take on any project that she’s passionate about.

“Lindsay represents journalists, scientists, internationally best-selling novelists as well as debut novelists, New Yorker cartoonists, bloggers, and Instagram stars, among many others. She loves to uncover new talent and to work with her clients to develop great proposals from the spark of an idea.”

661. Name of Agent: Danielle Svetcov

Looking for: “Her taste is reflected in the journalism and narrative nonfiction she’s sold, e.g. Deep: Freediving, Renegade Science, and What the Ocean Tells Us About Ourselves; its natural follow-up Breath: The New Science of a Lost Art; a cultural history of our bodies under water, Why We Swim; a refusal to be grammatically cornered, Semicolon: The Past, Present, and Future of a Misunderstood Mark; a refusal to be artfully ignored Broad Strokes and She Votes; and a story of greed that threatens us all (where we least expect it), Kill Shot.

“Also, to offset the Victorian in her, she signs funny books, e.g. Skymaul: Happy Crap You Can Buy From A Plane; Look Big, a guide to surviving wild-animal close-encounters (which is funnier than you might think); What to Talk About; Bike Snob; and Minnesota-Book-of-the-Year nominee, The Annie Year, an ensemble novel that blurs heartland and heartburn.

“Of course, she has to eat, too... She represents an incredible stable of chefs, restaurateurs, and food/ag-thinkers—many of them IACP and Beard Award winners—including Shalane Flanagan and Elyse Kopecky’s New York Times bestselling Run Fast Eat Slow; Bryant Terry’s Afro-Vegan and Vegetable Kingdom; Michelle Polzine’s Baking at the 20th Century Café; Russell Moore and Allison Hopelain’s This is Camino; Adrianna Adarme’s The Year of Cozy; Stuart Briozza and Nicole Krasinski’s State Bird Provisions; Brandon Jew’s Mr. Jiu’s in Chinatown; Sophie Egan’s OK to Eat; and many more.”

665. Name of Agent: Courtney Paganelli

Looking for: “Courtney enjoys reading character-driven literary fiction, diverse voices, dark psychological fiction, and anything so scary it will make her hope she locked her doors. Her interests span across genres, but she particularly gravitates towards realistic adult or young adult novels that offer multiple points of view, feature complex relationships, or have dashes of paranormal activity or romance. Her absolute favorite novels incite emotion, whether fear, heartbreak, or happiness — a book that makes her feel something is one she will read time and time again.

“In the nonfiction space, Courtney is drawn to true crime, millennial-driven self-help, practical business, pop culture, memoirs written by marginalized voices, and books that advocate for women’s rights and social justice issues.”

LIZA DAWSON ASSOCIATES

671. Name of Agent: Liza Dawson

Looking for: “She specializes in: Smart, plot-driven bestselling fiction. Memorable, confidently-written, literary fiction. Page-turning thrillers that teach you about spycraft, foreign intrigue or an unusual career. Mysteries – featuring brainy detectives. Literary fiction for book clubs. Breakout historical novels.

“She wants storytellers with electric voices. If you sent her a historical literary thriller featuring a brilliant wizard who reads Dickens, she would be very happy. Or a dark, compelling, contemporary novel about a former CIA agent who is afraid for her life. Or a novel about social class, a contemporary BONFIRE OF THE VANITIES.

“In nonfiction, she is drawn to cross-cultural and women’s issues written by experts. She is looking for narrative history, memoirs about women and men who have escaped from closed, repressive societies and books by journalists and poets who are trying to make sense of exotic locations, race, the environment, Wall Street, Washington, and the South. Humor and tenderness are a plus, and she has a weakness for cartoonists and quirky humor. Of course, lists like this are ridiculous, but you already know that.”

716. Name of Agent: Laney Katz Becker

Looking for: “Laney gravitates toward “book club fiction,” (i.e. novels with substance that you’re eager to talk about); novels with a great voice; character-driven stories; and smart, psychological thrillers and novels of suspense. She is open to practical nonfiction and memoir, but only if the author has a strong platform. She’s always on the prowl for narrative nonfiction (especially from journalists or experts). She does NOT represent romance, cozy mysteries, sci-fi, fantasy, paranormal or dystopian fiction, nor does she handle young adult, children’s, middle grade or poetry.”

717. Name of Agent: Rayhané Sanders

Looking for: “She represents and is on the lookout for literary and historical fiction, upmarket book-club fiction and comic novels, select YA (no speculative elements, please), propulsive narrative nonfiction, linked essay collections, and select memoir. She likes projects that are voice-centered and site-specific, whether that be a place, profession, or subculture. Though quality of writing is the most important factor, she is particularly interested in fresh voices telling fresh stories we haven’t heard before (including for YA audiences), and is fond of immigrant stories and stories concerned with race, sexuality, specific cultural settings, cross-cultural themes, and notions of identity.”

729. Name of Agent: Christa Heschke

Looking for: “For YA, she is especially interested in contemporary, thriller/mystery, fantasy and horror. She looks for a compelling voice and a strong hook that will set a YA novel apart in the flooded market. She is open to all types of middle grade and especially enjoys adventure, mystery, and magical realism. For both YA and MG, she is interested in unique settings and cultural influences, interesting structure, complicated romances, diverse characters, sister or friendship-centric stories, and stories that feature artists of any kind. In picture books she is drawn to cute, funny stories (as opposed to sweet and quiet) that will grab kids as well as the occasional nonfiction biography on a subject whose story has yet to be told.

“Christa is not looking for any Adult fiction or non-fiction, paranormal or dystopian at this time.”

NEON LITERARY

761. Name of Agent: Anna Sproul-Latimer

Looking for: “She represents all types of adult nonfiction--from memoir and history to pop culture, science, and parenting--as well as select literary fiction.

“Anna is drawn to buzzing, bright, curious, and slightly demented authors driven by enthusiasm so infectious that (inter)national audiences are already paying attention. She seeks authors motivated by a true mission--a clear answer to the question, “What is the legacy I want to leave in the world?” Of particular interest are those who’ve made moral leadership lemonade from the lemons of trauma: authors who are whistleblowers, Cassandras, “unelectable” elected officials, and survivors.”

825. Name of Agent: Ashley Herring Blake

Looking for: “Ashley is actively seeking character-driven upmarket and commercial Adult fiction, particularly from queer, BIPOC, and QBIPOC creators featuring their stories.

“She is most interested in romance, including contemporary and historical romantic comedies, contemporary and historical romance, as well as women’s (or any marginalized gender identity), fantasy, and contemporary fiction. In romance, she’s drawn to beautiful writing, voices that leap off the page, flawed characters, unique and charming settings whether in small towns or big cities, vibrant friendship and messy families, and fresh takes on familiar tropes. She enjoys both the slow burn and instant attraction, and HEA or HFN is a must. She is desperate for f/f or f/nb romance in particular--rom coms, contemporary romance, historical, all of it. In book club fiction and contemporary fiction, she’s looking for strong female, nonbinary, and trans voices that challenge one’s perspective, full of messy and complex relationships and a touch of romance, multi-generational stories, extremely messy coming-of-age stories, and stories featuring complex family and friendship dynamics.

“Gothic horror stories are also high on her list (more spook, less gore), as well as fresh Cozy Mysteries with a capable yet messy heroine, full of humor, heart, and intrigue. She’s also into mystery with a decidedly Agatha Christie feel.

“She is also seeking light fantasies (more adult romantic fantasies please) with unique world-building, particularly those that build on non-Western cultures, myths, and legends. Witches are a favorite of hers, particularly those that might belong on the shelf next to Practical Magic or The Year of the Witching. She’s very much looking for a vampire or witchy rom com.

“In both Middle Grade and Young Adult, she's only looking for queer and/or BIPOC contemporary stories at this time.”

846. Name of Agent: Taylor Haggerty

Looking for: “I love books that surprise me: the ones that are just a little unexpected, a little more clever, or funny, or twisty than I’d anticipated going in. Across the board, I’m looking for high-concept premises and manuscripts that demand to be read in a single sitting. I also love books that blend genres or try new and interesting modes of storytelling, whether that means playing around with format, or putting a new spin on a tried-and-true trope.

“I often describe my taste as boiling down to "witches and kissing" - smart, inventive, female-focused fantasy on one end of the spectrum, and fun, delightful romance on the other (though sometimes the stars align and the witches are kissing!).”

847. Name of Agent: Molly O’Neill

Looking for: “Make me wonder from your manuscript's first page (or even better yet, from its title!); make me care about its characters and feel things deeply alongside of them; or wow me with its masterful storytelling, and I'll be well on my way to becoming one of its—and your!—fiercest advocates. As an agent, I love the creative process and early-stage project development, am invigorated by business strategy and entrepreneurial thinking, and am fascinated by the intersections of art, commerce, creativity, and innovation. I'm especially passionate about the people behind books, and take pride in discovering and evangelizing talented authors and illustrators, expanding the global reach of their work, and finding new ways to build connections and community among creators, readers, stories, and their champions. I'm looking for stories that will start a trend, define a generation of readers, and surprise, delight, resonate with, and build empathy among, readers worldwide.”

866. Name of Agent: Thao Le

Looking for: “Thao represents picture books and graphic novels by author-illustrators, Middle Grade fiction, and Young Adult across genres, as well as Science-Fiction/Fantasy and select Romance for adults.

“In the picture book realm, she's excited to work with illustrators who write their own picture books and is most drawn to art that is emotive and vivid. Her tastes tend towards stories that are character driven, witty, progressive, and ends with a twist.

“In Middle Grade and YA, whether in prose or graphic novel format, she’s currently seeking contemporary stories that are witty, heartfelt, and authentic. She's especially drawn to stories about family and friendships from the POV of diverse protagonists. She’s a fan of young characters who are passionate about the arts, sports, STEM, activism, and geeky fandoms. She adores stories with a touch of magic and whimsy, and is a fan of mythology and fairytales.

“In the Adult SFF realm, she’s a fan of character driven contemporary fantasy, near future science fiction, and romantic space operas. She is particularly excited about stories with fresh twists to common genre tropes.”

867. Name of Agent: Jessica Watterson

Looking for: “Jessica is always on the hunt for new and diverse projects, and is most interested in all genres of romance. She's drawn to fun, fresh voices, and character driven stories that keep a reader turning the page needing to know what happens next.

Independent heroines are a must, in addition to well realized heroes who aren't alpha-holes.

“She also loves Women’s Fiction that concerns itself with elements of life that can greatly change one’s perspective and outlook on cultures and experiences.

“Jessica is also open to select Cozy Mysteries that feature fun and independent heroines that can take what life throws at them with aplomb and a bit of humor.

“On the YA side, she is looking for just about anything in the contemporary sphere, and of course a bit of romance thrown in is never a bad thing in her opinion. She is also interested in select author illustrated picture books that capture the fun and joy of reading between adults and children.

“In the non-fiction realm, Jessica is solely open to Pop Culture projects for authors who have established platforms.”

868. Name of Agent: Suzy Evans

Looking for: “In the adult market, Suzy is particularly on the hunt for great serious nonfiction, especially by historians who are looking to make a transition from an academic to trade readership and journalists who have something unique and significant to say. She’s also on the lookout for smart parenting books with truly useful, original hooks that fill a gap in the market (bonus points for humor!); food, health, and diet-related titles, especially culinary histories of all flavors and tastes; sports books with crossover appeal in other genres, especially history and philosophy (she’d LOVE to find the next Golf in the Kingdom or Zen and the Art of Archery); self-help of every stripe by authors with well-established platforms and riveting, elegantly-written memoir (recent favorites include William Finnegan’s Barbarian Days and Paul Kalanithi's deeply-rendered When Breath Becomes Air), as well as cookbooks with inventive new twists; humor, especially as it relates to parenting; and small, quirky books that make her smile or think about the world in entirely new and surprising ways. She'd also love to find a great legal thriller.

“On the children’s front, Suzy has a great love of middle grade and is particularly on the hunt for lively, engaging nonfiction that pops off the page and makes kids excited about reading and learning; wacky/hilarious commercial MG fiction with series potential; and graphic novels that bring history, great works of literature and fascinating historical figures (think Socrates! Machiavelli! Hamilton!) to life.

“She also have a soft spot for classic, coming-of-age MG works, contemporary YA fiction that tackles difficult issues in bold, daring ways and with inventive formats that can be brought into the classroom to stimulate meaningful discussion and debate (a la Walter Dean Myers’ Monster) and sweet, lyrical picture books that capture the imagination and call for multiple readings (favorite classics include Stellaluna and The Cat Who Walked Across France). She'd also love to find MG/YA fiction that explores diversity in all its glorious manifestations and an exciting, high-concept thriller that has "MOVIE!" written all over it.”

869. Name of Agent: Jennifer Kim

Looking for: “In YA Sci-Fi/Fantasy, Jennifer is looking for multicultural projects featuring multi-dimensional, even flawed protagonists from diverse backgrounds. She enjoys unique, high concept stories, with strong world building and character development. She especially appreciates atmospheric settings.

“In contemporary YA, Jennifer is looking for unique, uncommon teen stories with an authentic voice. She enjoys stories that tackle themes of being an outsider, displacement, race, sexuality, and self-discovery, and is particularly drawn to bicultural characters and stories centered around subcultures, countercultures, and found families.

“In the Middle Grade realm, Jennifer is drawn to stories that don’t shy away from scary or tough subjects. She enjoys witty, whimsy stories, and values tales of friendship, families and found-families, and discovery. She is particularly drawn to stories that feature characters with unique and interesting hobbies or skills.

“In the adult market, Jennifer is particularly drawn to eccentric, unusual stories. She values a distinct narrative voice and memorable characters and settings, and is drawn to travel narratives, historical fiction, coming of age stories, family sagas, stories of displacement, and magical realism.

“In general, Jennifer loves literary writing, with challenging themes and characters. She is excited to add writers of diversity (including, but not limited to, all ethnicity, sexual orientation, mental and physical health, and socioeconomic status) to her client list.”

875. Name of Agent: Stephanie Delman

Looking for: “Stephanie represents a spectrum of authors who write for the adult market, with a focus on fiction: literary/upmarket, psychologically propulsive suspense, near-historical fiction, and novels that play with genre and contain slight elements of surrealism, magic, or sci-fi. Some of Stephanie’s buzzwords in fiction: cults, hauntings, migrations, intergenerational trauma, inheritance, hunger, devotion, curses, competition, cultural commentary, wit, and whimsy. Stephanie also represents a limited selection of narrative nonfiction projects by authors with established platforms and unique perspectives. In nonfiction, she is looking for longform reportage that reads like fiction, true crime, and expert accounts of dark and far-flung corners of the world. In both fiction and nonfiction, Stephanie favors #ownvoices, diverse perspectives, and feminist narratives.”

877. Name of Agent: Wendi Gu

Looking for: “Wendi is privileged to represent a talented range of award-winning and bestselling children's books authors and illustrators. For all children's books categories, from picture books to young adult, Wendi values emotional stories filled with lyricism and heart. She is drawn toward books that help dismantle stereotypes about mental health, ability, and race. As the daughter of immigrants, she sees special importance in stories about migration and displacement, especially as they relate to friendship and family. For middle grade and young adult novels, she enjoys voice-driven stories with contemplative characters. Occasionally, she enjoys truly absurd humor. But above all, Wendi is looking for authors and illustrators who value inclusivity and intersectionality, whose writing and art encourages love and care. Bonus points go to stories from different parts of the globe.”

878. Name of Agent: Sarah Phair

Looking for: “Sarah represents a range of fiction and nonfiction authors writing for the adult market. In fiction she focuses on books by women, for women, ranging from commercial, to upmarket and literary. If you would read it in your book club or take it on vacation, it might be a good fit for Sarah’s list. She particularly loves: family sagas, female friendship, complex psychological suspense, campus novels, anti-heroines, and a good love story. In nonfiction her areas of interest include feminist issues, millennial topics, pop culture, and anything about food. She is especially interested in projects analyzing the future of media consumption, how and what we eat, agriculture, and housing.”

879. Name of Agent: Abigail Frank

Looking for: “Abigail is passionate about stories for young people, especially those that are hilarious, poetic, quietly heartbreaking, and/or swoon-worthy, and she cares about voice, above all. She gravitates towards picture books that feel entirely original, chapter books with big personalities, and novels about unforgettable teens falling in love. She is committed to advocating for the work of authors and artists with marginalized identities, and she’s actively looking for stories that allow young readers to recognize themselves in the books they love. She is also looking for select adult projects, including narrative nonfiction (especially if it explores pop culture, healthcare, or higher education) and rom-com-y commercial fiction.”

880. Name of Agent: Iwalani Kim

Looking for: “Iwalani is seeking adult upmarket and literary fiction and select narrative nonfiction. In fiction, she loves coming-of-age narratives, family dramas, and stories that challenge systems of power. She gravitates toward lush prose, wry humor, irreverent characters, and a sense of yearning. In nonfiction, she is looking for literary memoir and cultural criticism. She is particularly drawn to food writing, deep dives into subcultures, and writing that complicates the idea of ‘paradise’ or explores progressive movements such as prison industrial complex (PIC) abolition.”

881. Name of Agent: Bailey Tamayo

Looking for: “Bailey is seeking middle grade, YA, and adult speculative fiction, fantasy, sci fi, horror, and anything in between—especially when the genre is a unique setting for the deeply human stories underneath. She is drawn to poignant coming of age narratives like The Graveyard Book, I Am Not Okay With This, and any given Ghibli film. Her favorite stories are those that are gently heartbreaking, hopeful, or (ideally) both. She enjoys sharp humor, lyrical prose, lovable and complex characters, and rich worldbuilding. She is eager to advocate for underrepresented authors, and especially to explore these viewpoints through horror, such as Welcome to Night Vale, The Magnus Archives, and Mexican Gothic.”

SCOVIL GALEN GHOSH LITERARY AGENCY

885. Name of Agent: Russell Galen

Looking for: “In fiction, my passion is novels which stretch the bounds of reality. There are scores of different ways to do that and I love them all. A novel needs to take me some place I can’t get to in a car, whether it be the past, the future, a fantasy world, an alternate historical track, a world in which our world touches another that is hidden or rarely seen, or one which has been changed by some new technology, event, or idea.

“In nonfiction I do strong, serious books on almost any subject. I won’t take on a nonfiction book that doesn’t teach me something. I don’t do books which are merely entertaining, or which are bullshit (diet or pop psych books that don’t really help people, for instance). I’m interested in science, history, journalism, biography, business, memoir, nature, politics, sports, contemporary culture, literary nonfiction, etc. I will take on any book by a good writer willing to work hard and spend a year plumbing the depths of some fascinating aspect of man or nature.”

SEAN MCCARTHY LITERARY AGENCY

887. Name of Agent: Sean McCarthy

Looking for: “He is drawn to flawed, multifaceted characters with devastatingly concise writing in YA, and character-driven work or smartly paced mysteries/adventures in MG. In picture books, he looks more for unforgettable characters, off-beat humor, and especially clever endings. He is not currently interested in issue-driven stories or query letters that pose too many questions.”

SELECTRIC ARTISTS

890. Name of Agent: Christopher Schelling

Looking for: “Some categories have become tougher to sell - memoir, YA fantasy, science fiction (both adult and YA), domestic thrillers - so the bar is set even higher since I already have good writers in those areas. But I'm always looking for commercial fiction, narrative nonfiction, graphic novels and graphic nonfiction.”

894. Name of Agent: Kelly Thomas

Looking for: “Kelly is most interested in nonfiction (narrative nonfiction, memoirs, true crime) and adult fiction (psychological thrillers, mysteries, crime, horror, suspense, and dark comedies). She enjoys fast-paced, plot-driven fiction with twists, turns, and jaw-dropping moments. She is drawn to stories about leadership, overcoming adversity, and beating the odds. Stories that are told from a unique psychological vantage point are always of interest. The truth is often stranger than fiction, so Kelly is actively looking for the next great true crime manuscript in the vein of Ann Rule with a murderous and methodical plot. She loves multi-layered protagonists who struggle between what is right and wrong, and anti-heroes who are villainous but endearing at the same time. Some of her favorite books that perfectly master this include Dexter, American Psycho, Fight Club, Psycho, Interview With a Vampire, and My Sister the Serial Killer.”

895. Name of Agent: Ameerah Holliday

Looking for: “Ameerah is primarily interested in young adult fiction, fantasy/paranormal (bonus points for witchcraft), romance, literary fiction and novels in verse. She looks for writing that explores diverse experiences with elements of intersectionality. She's drawn to stories that take you on a journey through growth and she loves a good friendship story. For non-fiction she's interested in writing derived from performing arts or niche passion projects, minority entrepreneurs, astrology and discussions of mental health in minority communities.”

Read more: <https://www.serendipitylit.com/agents>

896. Name of Agent: Gina Damasco

Looking for: “Commercial fiction with a literary sensibility. Commercial women’s fiction, particularly involving monumental career challenges, and foreign cultural clashes. Literary fiction with layered themes, strong voice, and well-crafted symbolism. Nonfiction that transcends an individual’s personal narrative; I am especially drawn to works that dovetail with my background in human rights and social justice work, and if there's a local and global connection, even better. Creative nonfiction: Open to obscure topics as long as they weave in greater social issues. Memoir with a distinct voice, and a unique perspective on global themes.”

SHEREE BYKOFSKY

900. Name of Agent: Sheree Bykofsky

Looking for: “There are a few areas I particularly like in non-fiction: health, business, prescriptive non-fiction, self-help/psychology, humor, biography and current affairs, women’s interest, cookbooks, spiritual, multicultural, parenting, anything to do with games, movies or music. In fiction, I particularly like commercial fiction with literary appeal and mysteries. I’m always looking for a bestseller in any category.

“Some of the genres I generally will not represent include horror, westerns, occult, and fantasy.”

SINSHEIMER LITERARY

901. Name of Agent: Max Sinsheimer

Looking for: “I represent a range of adult and select children's nonfiction, with a particular interest in food, science, and society. Sometimes those interests intersect, as in Larissa Zimmeroff’s Technically Food (Abrams Press), about the lab-driven future of food.

Many of my books have a policy or advocacy angle, including Marion Nestle's Unsavoury Truth (Basic Books), Michael Jacobson's Salt Wars (MIT Press), and Catherine Donnelly's Ending the War on Artisan Cheese (Chelsea Green). I'm on the lookout for more great place-specific food narratives, having recently sold a sake travelogue called Rice, Water, Earth (Tuttle).

“There's more on my plate (pun!) than just food and drink. I'm arguably representing the opposite of food and drink with a book about fasting, cleverly called Fast (Abrams Press). I love working with investigative and longform journalists like Fast's author, Steve Hendricks. I'm also keen to represent more environmental and social issues books, having sold Mario Ariza's Disposable City (Nation Books), about Miami's sea level rise crisis, and If I Don't Make It, I Love You (Skyhorse), a collection of narratives from school shooting survivors.”

905. Name of Agent: Lindsey Smith

Looking for: “Lindsey is excited to work with first-time authors as well as those who are established. She is seeking nonfiction only, specifically prescriptive nonfiction that is compelling, and voice-driven, with the ability to shed light on a topic that might be unknown. She especially loves projects and people that bring humor to serious situations.

“Lindsey is interested in cookbooks, lifestyle, health, pop culture, gender issues, self-help, true crime, and current events. She is especially interested in podcast-to-book ideas, journalists who specialize in specific research, and cookbooks that have a niche and/or narrative voice. Please do not send diet books.”

SPENCERHILL ASSOCIATES

906. Name of Agent: Karen Solem

Looking for: “Karen is looking for literary and commercial fiction and non-fiction, primarily for the adult market. She would love to read a richly detailed historical novel or historical suspense, a big sprawling family saga, or engrossing women’s fiction. She especially enjoys southern women’s fiction; and given her passion for animals, seeks any work involving dogs, horses or the natural world. She loves a great suspense novel and especially those with a psychological hook.”

949. Name of Agent: Heather Cashman

Looking for: “Heather is currently seeking submissions for middle grade and young adult.

“For fiction, she’ll consider all genres and loves a good genre splice. For non-fiction, anything that takes her back to those days in the library when she wanted to learn about someone, something, and somewhere new.

“For all writing, Heather enjoys unique characters formed from their own experiences in a unique world. The characters need to feel real with a distinct voice from the first line. Thematic elements and strong character arcs are a must. She loves commercial fiction that has a literary flair and inclusive books that bring us together as citizens of the world.”

951. Name of Agent: Michelle Hauck

Looking for: “Michelle is accepting middle grade, young adult and some select adult genres. She is not accepting queries for nonfiction, picture books or chapter books at this time.

“For middle grade and young adult, she accepts all genres. She prefers her romance to be sweet, her mysteries to be cozy, and her contemporary to be light, fun, or quirky. Her sweet spot is SFF. She likes villains with a shade of gray and is not interested in books that focus solely on bullying. She likes stories with complex main characters, deep secondary characters, strong character arcs, and layers of obstacles. A little humor goes a long way, but she also likes darker stories in SFF. She’d love to see twists on old classics and myths or retellings featuring new points of view. Hit her with your adventuresome MG and your breathtaking YA. Bonus points for stories that have elements of climate change or the environment, or siblings working together.

“For adult, Michelle is open to all kinds of SFF, including magical realism and steampunk, cozy mysteries (think Hollywood Homicide or A Lady’s Guide to Etiquette and Murder), and historical fiction. She prefers her historical fiction to be set prior to the 1930s. In fact, 1800s and older are better. No World War II or Biblical stories please.

“For SFF in all age categories, she does not care for stories that feature graphic violence or main characters that enjoy violence. She loves, loves, loves a high-stakes epic fantasy or any fantasy set in a secondary world, though any subgenre of fantasy is good. A character are that plays a part in the plot is fantastic. For science fiction, she prefers space opera over dystopian, but a dystopian with lots of action (Hunger Games, Red Rising, less The Giver) is great, too.

“She is always open to LGBTQ, authors of color, the disabled and all diverse underrepresented voices.”

952. Name of Agent: Melissa Richeson

Looking for: “In picture books, Melissa is looking for the heartfelt, the humorous, and everything in between. She’s especially drawn to thoughtful themes, and a well-done rhyme will always catch her eye. Melissa also loves chapter books with quick pacing, a great hook, and a well-researched world. In middle grade, she adores mystery, humor, adventure, and a sense of imagination. Relatable characters and a great voice are key! For young adult, Melissa typically looks for high concept contemporary or historical manuscripts, but a light sci-fi or a fantasy in a fresh world can draw her in too. Bring on all the sweet romances with authentic dialogue and page-turning stakes! Use subtle wit and intelligent wordplay, and she's all in. Non-fiction projects for all ages are welcome as well, and diverse #ownvoices are encouraged.

“Melissa is not a good fit for horror, paranormal, or graphic violence. Less nightmares, more daydreams, please.”

959. Name of Agent: Aemilia Phillips

Looking for: “She’s young, scrappy and hungry, and is particularly interested in writers who push conventional boundaries in order to address cultural, political, and social justice issues. With family on both sides of the Mexican border and interests in journalism, narrative non-fiction, and literary fiction, she looks for diverse, smart writing with an impactful story to tell.

“For non-fiction she’s looking for driven, obsessed writers and topics that challenge the way we think about the world, with a particular interest in Latin American and feminist voices. She loves books that at first glance appear to be commercial, but that are also smart cultural critiques that force readers to examine new viewpoints. She’s fascinated by darker, complex fictional characters who upend preconceptions, stories with just a touch of magic, and novels that allow her to step into someone else’s shoes.”

979. Name of Agent: Victoria Cappello

Looking for: “I’m currently building a varied list of both adult fiction and nonfiction titles. I’m drawn to stories that both illuminate and entertain, that show me the world from a different point of view while keeping me on the edge of my seat. I have a penchant for narratives that convey emotional truths about self, identity, and intimate relationships with compassion and nuance.”

Read more: <http://www.thebentagency.com/victoria-cappello>

980. Name of Agent: Gemma Cooper

Looking for: “My list is typified by big-concept, commercial series fiction. If you can describe your book in one line, or in an ‘X meets Y’ elevator pitch, I want to read it. I like books that have obvious potential for dramatic adaptation, be they a funny pre-school TV series or a big-budget feature film. I’m very keen to see writers from underrepresented communities, particularly those who write chapter books and middle-grade fiction.

“My sweet spot is middle-grade fiction, where I have the widest taste: anything from mystery to fantasy, historical to funny, adventure stories to serious topics, and all the gaps in between. Really, any middle-grade novel with a strong voice and/or a big hook will get my attention.”

981. Name of Agent: Claire Draper

Looking for: “For all the books I work with, I prefer to work with queer creators and BIPOC creators, and strongly encourage those creators to send me their work. Regardless of genre, age, subject, I like lighthearted, emotional, hopeful, adventurous reads. I prefer books with a fast pace, high stakes, and strong emotional development for the main character(s). I do not want to see books from authors writing identity based books not of their own identity.”

982. Name of Agent: Louise Fury

Looking for: “I’m looking for writers with a unique voice and an unforgettable and interesting story. I love experimental/unique structure, language, verse and formats.

“For YA and MG, I’d love modern retellings, STEM stories, heartfelt and/or funny contemporary novels and all types of middle grade fantasy. Always looking for books with well developed secondary characters.

“For nonfiction I’m particularly interested in pop science, self-help, cookbooks, true crime, humor, pop culture and sports. In romance, I love female heroines with unusual jobs or jobs usually reserved for the hero. I’d love it to be a layered, light and fun contemporary novel or a fresh and modern historical that reads like a romantic comedy. I love the fish-out-of-water trope, stories about nannies, body positivity, strong writing and diverse voices.”

983. Name of Agent: Molly Ker Hawn

Looking for: “I’m looking for middle grade and young adult fiction and graphic novels that are inventive, well-crafted, and rich with emotion. I’m also interested in non-fiction for readers ages 8–18. I like wit, but not snark; I prefer books that lean more toward literary than commercial, but of course, my perfect book neatly bridges the two. The fiction on my list all has a strong sense of authentic place, whether real or imaginary; I’m not the right agent for books with animal protagonists. Except maybe cats.

“I’m particularly interested in hearing writers from underrepresented communities.”

984. Name of Agent: Sarah Hornsley

Looking for: “My taste is varied and I’m looking for commercial and accessible literary adult fiction, YA and non-fiction. I am on the hunt for adult contemporary fiction and in particular I love novels which make me think about society from a different angle or pose a moral question... In terms of non-fiction, I’m looking for memoir and narrative non-fiction with some social commentary. For YA, I’m particularly interested in contemporary stories in the vein of ONE OF US IS LYING by Karen McManus and EVERYTHING, EVERYTHING by Nicola Yoon.”

986. Name of Agent: Zoë Plant

Looking for: “I am looking for middle grade and young adult fiction across all genres, as well as adult science-fiction, fantasy, horror and speculative fiction. My tastes lean towards the commercial, and I am particularly interested in seeing submissions from writers from traditionally underrepresented backgrounds... On the adult side, I like books that break away from very traditional epic fantasy – I’d love to find the next RF Kuang or Naomi Novik. I’m not the person for biblical retellings in a fantasy setting. Sci-fi doesn’t need to be grounded, but it does need to have an emotional heart to it, like A Long Way To A Small Angry Planet. And I prefer horror that has some kind of social conscience – scares for the Get Out audience. I am also open to general fiction with a speculative or gothic edge.

“Other things that I enjoy across all age groups: dry humour, quests, boarding schools/academies, the performing arts and stories that make me cry.”

988. Name of Agent: Laurel Symonds

Looking for: “I am seeking young adult and middle grade fiction with a special interest in contemporary and fantasy-with-a-twist. I look for engaging voices, commercial hooks, and immersive worlds. My YA tastes are pretty commercial whereas my middle grade tastes can skew more literary and I’m especially interested in middle grade that might lend itself to illustration.

“For picture books, graphic novels, and other illustrated work, my tastes are diverse, ranging from sophisticated to quirky to gently humorous. I am interested in art in all mediums, but especially appreciate a smart use of color and perspective.

“I also represent select nonfiction for children and young adults, especially projects about STEM or history with age-appropriate hooks and series potential.

“In every category, I am seeking voices that have previously been underrepresented and stories that have been overlooked.”

989. Name of Agent: Desiree Wilson

Looking for: “My perfect manuscripts combine high-concept hooks with low-concept settings and character-driven narratives, capturing a seed of truth in all the trappings of fantastical escapism. I love tangible, tactile worlds I can immerse in, and am a sucker for familiar bonds human characters and non-human creatures—from talking animals to eldritch horrors, sentient weapons to elementals, you had me at hello. I also love lush, opulent narratives, especially when tied to fantastical retellings of both Western and non-Western fairy tales with diverse, genderbent, and/or LGBTIA+ casts. I appreciate when Western retellings are given voice through non-Western lenses, especially when they cleverly adapt to the cultural expectations of their new settings.”

THE FRIEDRICH AGENCY

1011. Name of Agent: Molly Friedrich

Looking for: “I’m still looking for the debut novel that is irresistible, for the non-fiction proposal which alters the way I see the world. I’m a fairly catholic, straight-ahead reader; I don’t flourish without well-rounded, declarative sentences!”

1012. Name of Agent: Heather Carr

Looking for: “I’m drawn to voice-driven nonfiction that teaches me something new while never losing personal warmth and/or zaniness. There’s a specific kind of alchemy that happens for me when a nonfiction writer marries their command of a subject with personal vulnerability. I’m also interested in long-form journalism of any type, but especially as it relates to gender and sexuality. In fiction, I love literary novels about dysfunctional families and friendships, high-concept commercial fiction, and anything with a singular voice.”

1013. Name of Agent: Lucy Carson

Looking for: “I’m always hungry for high-concept fiction told in a sophisticated style, and it all comes down to tension and emotional involvement. On the non-fiction side, I’m drawn to hybrids that might not fall into a strict category but do combine strong voice with important research (such as the work of our own Lesley Blume and Florence Williams).”

1014. Name of Agent: Hannah Brattesani

Looking for: “I’m always intrigued by literary fiction that has a playful disregard for the rules of a novel, like SPEEDBOAT by Renata Adler, and I admire authors with a dark bent (Iain Reid) and an offbeat sense of humor (Jen Beagin). I’m drawn to narrative non-fiction that invites me into a community, culture, or lifestyle that I would never otherwise experience or reframes familiar subjects in humorous or surprising ways. I enjoy popular science but digest it in much the same way as I ate vegetables as a child: mixed into something I find more palatable – I need a strong story and voice to carry me through but appreciate every nutritious morsel I get along the way.”

1015. Name of Agent: Marin Takikawa

Looking for: “I’m an eclectic reader, but my comfort zone resides with character-driven upmarket and literary fiction. In particular, I’m always driven by the need to understand people and discover the various kinks that aren’t visible from the surface—what drives them? What do they desire most but can’t get? Who and what do they love? I’m particularly enamored by narratives about complex family relationships and those that subvert forms of power, specifically neocolonialist ones.”

THE GREENHOUSE LITERARY AGENCY

1031. Name of Agent: Sarah Davies

Looking for: “The core of Sarah’s literary tastes lies within middle grade and YA fiction. At the younger end her taste is eclectic. She loves adventurous and funny stories as well as those that are heartfelt, meaningful and voice driven – perhaps with a touch of magic – which perfectly evoke the experience of pre-teen children. In YA fiction she tends to go for fairly high-concept stories (ie where the concept is easily communicable) delivered with voice and a degree of lyricism. It’s the marriage of concept + craft that excites her. Beyond this, Sarah has represented a number of picture books, both fictional and biographies, and has a particular passion for adult suspense fiction aimed at female readers.”

Looking for: “High-concept, commercial and literary reads with unforgettable characters and a unique voice. Projects by BIPOC creators, as well as those marginalized identities that include sexuality, gender identity, and disability. She is actively building her list and looking for:

- Middle Grade across all genres except for sci-fi and horror
- Young Adult across all genres except for sci-fi and horror
- Graphic Novels for all ages except for adult
- Illustrators of Picture Books
- Non-fiction Children’s Books with a timely point of view and/or platform-driven project

1047. Name of Agent: Jackie Williams

Looking for: “Jackie reads a broad range of commercial and genre fiction, especially stories with psychological suspense, dark, gritty voices, speculative elements, multi-generational plots, and intricate world-building; even better if the stories are set in space. Some of her favorite authors include N.K. Jemisin, Haruki Murakami, Cixin Liu, Greek Hendricks and Sarah Pekkanen, Blake Crouch, and Daniel José Older.

“She also looks for narrative and prescriptive projects in food, drink, lifestyle, health/wellness, pop culture, business, productivity, humor, and memoir. When it comes to the nonfiction space, she's particularly excited about books and novelty items where food, lifestyle, and community intersect and projects that expand the reader's empathy and self-awareness. Books like AFRO-VEGAN, THE COOKING GENE, BAD GIRLS THROUGHOUT HISTORY, YOU SUCK AT COOKING, GET YOUR SHIT TOGETHER, EDUCATED, and ATOMIC HABITS come to mind.”

1102. Name of Agent: Laura Crockett

Looking for: “Interested in a variety of YA and adult fiction.

“In YA, she is interested in contemporary realistic fiction (romcoms, fierce feminists, strong family/friendship dynamics, light-hearted and humorous, interesting jobs/hobbies, hopeful), historical (original, accessible, unique, uncharted areas of female and/or non-Western history), and fantasy (fractured fairytales, culturally-influenced folklore, historically-inspired, elemental magic, lush world-building).

“In adult fiction, she is interested in fantasy (inspired by historical/cultural events and folklore, in-depth world-building and authentic characterizations, ensemble casts and solo protagonists, epic and low), historical fiction (spotlight on feminism, STEM, spies and code-breaking, non-Western and little-known eras, parallel narratives), and women's fiction (romcom, millennial-driven, slice of life, compelling obstacles and moral dilemmas).

“She's a character-driven reader seeking voice-y narratives and compelling stakes. She's always interested in diversity in all of its forms across all of the genres above.”

1106. Name of Agent: Elle Thompson

Looking for: "... is now looking to build her list with stories that are evocative, intelligent, and character-driven. She is interested in a wide variety of genres within YA and Adult fiction.

"In YA, she is most excited for high fantasy that features sweeping world-building and character-driven narratives; romantic fantasy filled with heists, fresh takes on lore, or lush adventure narratives; contemporary fiction that features relatable and charming voices going through periods of growth, discovery, and fresh takes on familiar problems; and horror/thriller, innovating on women as victims or antagonists, exploring terror in fresh ways, and examining how the myriad troubles of youth can be played out and communicated through the unknown. LGBTQIA+ representation is of particular importance to her across all genres.

"In adult fiction, Elle is currently seeking smart horror rooted in terror (particularly with gothic elements, special attention paid to atmosphere, and horrors that set themselves around the house or that have a historical rooting); cozy mysteries that evoke the countryside and the home; literary fiction that explores grief, historically centered and character-driven stories, or relationships (platonic or romantic, and I am particularly interested in stories that center the relationships and friendships of women); historical fiction centering on individual moments of change for either the environment or the protagonist and that is strongly character-focused; dark academia takes on thrillers, horror, or evocative literary fiction; women's fiction that offers stand-out protagonists and ensemble casts; and fantasy of all kinds."

1113. Name of Agent: Erica Spellman-Silverman

Looking for: Her client list is fairly eclectic. Her interest lies less in genre than in great storytelling—Erica says, “anything that gets into your head and your heart, anything you can’t stop thinking about, whether it’s literary fiction, thrillers, young adult, or memoir. Books and stories that touch the soul, that make you laugh or cry or both. Stories that haven’t been told before or are told in a different way: that’s what I am looking for.”

WENDY SHERMAN ASSOCIATES

1158. Name of Agent: Wendy Sherman

Looking for: “Wendy loves voice and story-driven fiction that hits that sweet spot between literary and mainstream. She has a passion for Southern voices, suspense with a well-developed protagonist, and has a weakness for family secrets, mother-daughter relationships, and realistic love stories.

“She is also interested in non-fiction with a unique twist by authors with a strong, well-developed media platform. Areas of interest include memoir, narrative non-fiction, practical and prescriptive, self-help and popular psychology, parenting, lifestyle, pop-culture, health, wellness, and spirituality, and and just about anything to do with food or dogs.”

1160. Name of Agent: Nicki Richesin

Looking for: “Nicki is especially interested in representing literary and upmarket fiction, young adult fiction, narrative nonfiction, and memoir. She is eager to discover authors writing about somewhat unconventional protagonists with an imaginative slant on storytelling. In young adult fiction, she has a particular fondness for coming-of-age stories that take a cue from classic literature. Nicki is drawn to memoir with a genuine voice that instantly connects with readers and takes them on a journey. She will always champion a story that investigates the true meaning of life, love, and identity.”

WORDSERVE LITERARY GROUP

1188. Name of Agent: Greg Johnson

Looking for: “Along with representing a broad array of adult nonfiction and fiction, Greg works with pastors and speakers, male and female, who have important and compelling messages to author for their constituents. He has also carved a niche by representing military nonfiction/memoir for those who have served our country from WWII until today. Business books, health and humor rounds out what he is looking to acquire.”

**

1190. Name of Agent: Nick Harrison

Looking for: "Nick is interested in representing authors of well-written fiction and non-fiction. For fiction, he prefers character-driven historical fiction, but will look at contemporary literary fiction and some genre fiction (mystery, romance, Amish). He will represent fiction for either the Christian or secular market, though if the latter, it must not offend Christian values in any way (language, sexuality, violence).

"For non-fiction, Nick looks for books by authors with a strong platform from which to promote the book. He will also consider quality books that are impulse purchases (books that don't require a large platform to promote). He welcomes well-written memoirs, books by high-profile speakers or entertainers, health-related books, issue-related books, and “deeper life” Christian living books.

"Slow-moving (hard to sell) genres for Nick are: speculative fiction, Bible studies, personal experience books, Bible prophecy, gift books, poetry, and generic Christian growth books."

1191. Name of Agent: Keely Boeving

Looking for: "Keely is looking for well-researched nonfiction books in the areas of health and wellness, business (especially books targeting women in the workplace), parenting and family life, social justice, and religious studies; as well as projects from diverse and under-represented voices. For the Christian market, she is seeking books in the areas of Christian Living, spiritual transformation, devotion and worship, and women's topics including motherhood, relationships and marriage, work-life balance, and calling. She is also seeking narrative nonfiction and memoir, and occasionally represents smart, well-crafted contemporary and literary fiction. In the children's market, she represents middle grade and the occasional picture book; she loves stories that feature characters who are quirky and complex, and books that allow children to see themselves in the pages, perhaps for the first time. She is not looking for thrillers, sci-fi, fantasy, or romance."
